'Last Chance' Talks

By ROBIN WRIGHT
Washington Post

JOHANNESBURG — For South Africans, this weekend's talks between South African Prime Minister John Vorster and U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger represent the most crucial phase of international diplomacy in their history, for South Africans generally feel the negotiations will decide whether the growing dispute between black and white in southern Africa is to be settled peacefully or by further confrontations.

The talks have already become known here as the "eleventh hour negotiations," indicating the feeling in South Africa that this is the last chance to find peaceful solutions, with Western backing, to the rapidly escalating confrontations in Rhodesia, Namibia and South Africa.

Dramatic events in all three areas since the first Kissinger-Vorster meeting on June 23 in West Germany have heightened pressure for fast action. And the approaching American election has further fueled the fires under the usually slow-moving South African government, which

CAPE TOWN — Police closed off this city's downtown core and warned whites to stay off the streets today as the mainly white shopping area again became a battle ground over South Africa's racial policies.

Unconfirmed reports said 5,000 youths were marching on Cape Town from outlying colored townships.

Today's clash in Cape Town came when police dispersed youths who were assembling at an open area on the edge of the city centre, just across from the main railway station.

The youths had been arriving by train and bus and seemed to be preparing to move into the city centre when police let loose a barrage of teargas canisters.

The choking gas spread over a three-block area and youths ran in all directions.

More riot squad vehicles stood by, ready to intercept the main body of marchers reported advancing on the city.

The rioting flashed from downtown Cape Town to black and colored townships at Langa, Hanover Park and Maitland, where police overnight uncovered caches of gasoline bombs.

George Abrey, a security official, said he saw at least 10 persons faint from the teargas fired into an underground shopping centre near Adderley Street and helped them up to the street level before passing out himself.

One bystander, Ansel Slome, suddenly found himself among a crowd of demonstrators at a downtown intersection when a squad of riot police in camouflage fatigues and wearing gas masks approached. He turned to run but was wounded and felled by a volley of buckshot fired by police.

Police said one colored person was killed by police gunfire at a high school, bringing to 297 the number killed in 10 weeks of nationwide anti-government rioting.

Police said they shot and killed two colored men in Thursday's violence in the townships, which followed the clashes here. Unofficial reports said a third man also died.

The South African Press Association news agency said one of the dead was a 10-year-old boy.

Belknap Case Appeal

After a half-hour meeting Vander Zalm said Belknap had offered his resignation, "but I will not ask him for it."

Belknap was fined $250 earlier this week by Nanaimo juvenile court Judge Stanley Wardill who ruled that Belknap must pay the fine, and $50 in restitution, on behalf of a 13-year-old boy charged with several break-ins and the theft of a car.

Belknap, as superintendent of child welfare, is the legal guardian of about 9,500 B.C. juveniles who are wards of the state.

Vander Zalm said he would meet Attorney-General Garde Gardom when he returns from holidays next week and recommend that the government appeal the ruling on behalf of Belknap.

Vander Zalm said if the appeal is not successful, he will recommend to cabinet that the government pay the $300 fine and all court costs for Belknap, "and if the government won't pick it up, I'll pick it up myself.

"I'm sure the government will stand behind its civil servants 100 per cent," Vander Zalm said.

Belknap said he did not want to comment while the appeal was pending.

VIKING GO

PASADENA (UPI) — America's second Viking got the final go for a landing on the Utopia Dunes of Mars today to search for life where morning fogs and evening frosts suggest there is available moisture for thirsty organisms.

Viking 2 was scheduled to land at 3:58 p.m. Victoria time, but it will be midmorning on the red planet.

Bright-eyed Zipper with Hickson

ZIPPER GOES HOME

Last month Zipper was lost, wandering down the highway outside Cache Creek; lately he's been staying in Victoria and Saturday he flies home to Kamloops.

Zipper is a handsome mostly Airdale dog who can thank two unidentified girls and a persistent staff at the Victoria SPCA shelter for finally getting him back home.

Kennel master Nelson Hickson detailed the story this way today: the women vacationing in the Interior came upon Zipper on the road outside Cache Creek, obviously lost.

They inquired at houses along the highway but no one knew the animal so they brought him along to Victoria, turning him over to the SPCA.

Hickson wrote the SPCA office in Kamloops, the nearest one to Cache Creek, asking if there had been inquiries about a lost dog like Zipper.

Meanwhile he kept Zipper long after the time dogs are usually put up for adoption or destroyed.

Thursday he got a phone call from an elderly man, George Ferguson of Walhachin, a little community near Cache Creek, thrilled that his dog had not disappeared forever.

Zipper goes home Saturday, by air freight to Kamloops where the owner will meet him at the airport.

She Took on GM—and Won

VANCOUVER (CP) — After trading in one lemon for another, a West Vancouver high school teacher took General Motors and one of its dealers to court and won Thursday.

Judge Wally Graig ruled in small claims court that Jean Cox was entitled to reimbursement from General Motors and Bowell McLean Ltd. for costs incurred when the engine block in her car had to be replaced at a cost of $849.36.

Mrs. Cox testified she needed a reliable car to commute 38 miles to and from work in North Delta each day.

So in 1973 she traded in Detroit's all-time super-lemon, a Firenza, for a car recommended to her by Bowell McLean — a brand new Pontiac Astre.

Despite keeping it fully serviced, the car started requiring excessive amounts of oil after it had done 36,000 miles.

She took it to Neil Richmond, a North Vancouver engine specialist, who advised her of extensive wear in one of the cylinders and said this was symptomatic of an overheating problem that General Motors had acknowledged with its Astres by extending the warranty.

Mrs. Cox said she then contacted Bowell McLean only to be informed there was nothing the firm could do under warranty.

Richmond replaced the engine block for her. He said in court Thursday that anything less would have been a "Mickey Mouse job".

Judge Craig ruled that Mrs. Cox was entitled to reimbursement because General Motors and Bowell McLean knew of the general defect and there was an implied warranty by the dealer that the car would be reliable.

Profits Forcing Propane Controls

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Ottawa has indicated it will bring in price controls for propane, B.C. Energy Commission spokesman D. I. Johannessen said today.

He made the comment in releasing a commission report showing the price of propane had doubled in the past three years and 50 per cent of the increase was pure profit for producers and distributors.

Johannessen said the B.C. Energy Commission has held lengthy talks with officials of the federal department of energy, mines and natural resources and the Ottawa people have indicated they favor controls on propane to match those on oil and natural gas.

Provincial Energy Minister Jack Davis is trying to set up a meeting with his federal counterpart, Alastair Gillespie, to discuss the propane report and to establish price controls.

The report urged a reduction in provincial taxes on propane and the beginning of a two-price system.

Davis said he would refer the question of a tax cut to the provincial cabinet but no action could be taken before the budget in the spring. The commission recommended replacing the 7 per cent sales tax with a flat rate of half a cent per gallon, the same as for heating oils.

"As for price controls, we believe that this is really a federal matter," Davis said.

Johannessen said the commission would like Ottawa to set a ceiling price for propane in B.C. based upon the Edmonton price plus freight charges. A higher price could be established for export but producers would have to guar-

Jobless Jump For U.S.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — United States unemployment edged up slightly in August to 7.9 per cent, its highest level since last December, when it was 8.2 per cent.

The latest statistics cast some doubt on earlier predictions that unemployment will drop below 7 per cent by the end of the year.

Meanwhile, wholesale prices, an indicator of prices consumers eventually pay, fell 0.1 per cent in the U.S. last month, mainly because of a steep 2.9 per cent decline in food prices.

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The value of the Mexican peso dropped Thursday from 12.50 to 20.50 to the U.S. dollar as banks resumed money exchange operations for the first time since the government announced the peso would be floated on the world market.

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford is ordering government agencies not to hire foreigners living in the United States. In barring immigrants who are not yet citizens from holding government jobs, Ford also urged Congress to come up with legislation that will say exactly what rights aliens can exercise within the U.S.

OPORTO, Portugal (Reuter) — Two bombs exploded early this morning, a few hours befor President Antonio Ramalho Eanes was due to begin an official visit. One person was slightly injured.

B.C.'s 40,000 construction workers will join in the Canadian Labor Congress day of protest Oct. 14, Ray Gautier, secretary treasurer of the B.C. and Yukon Territory Building and Trades Council, said today.

15 Die in Plunge

MEXICO CITY (AP) — At least 15 persons were killed and 30 others injured Thursday when a bus went over a 50-foot embankment west of Mexico City.

Big-Time Two-Bit Thief

MONTREAL (CP) — A former toll-gate employee on an autoroute north of Montreal pleaded guilty in session court Thursday to the theft of $105,486 in 25-cent tolls.

Samuel Desjardins, 45, who had collected tolls for 13 years, said he took the money home in bleach jars during a nine-month period in 1975.

The woman he lived with pleaded guilty as an accomplice.

Chief Judge Andre Fabien released both on bail until Oct. 7, when they are to be sentenced.

Lock-Out Certain

VANCOUVER (CP) — Only an eleventh-hour solution to a dispute over a 10-minute walk to a hot lunch can prevent the B.C. construction industry from staging its second shutdown of the summer today.

A fight between the Construction Labor Relations Association and the striking plumbers' union over paid downtown parking has been resolved but late Thursday the lunch issue stood in the way of industrial peace.

Union plumbers who have been striking for more than two weeks over the issue were joined Thursday by members of the boilermakers' union.

Chuck McVeigh, association president, said the association was willing to abandon lock-out plans but the plumbers must return to work first.

Electrical Firms Fixed Prices

TORONTO (CP) — Three major Canadian lighting firms have been convicted of conspiring to lessen competion between 1959 and 1967.

Mr. Justice Lawrence Pennell of Ontario Supreme Court, in a 99-page judgment released Thursday, found Canadian General Electric Co. Ltd., Westinghouse Canada Ltd. and GTE Sylvania Canada Ltd. guilty of controlling and dominating the lighting markets.

He acquitted the three firms of two charges of forming a combine or monopoly.

Sentencing has been postponed until the nine lawyers involved have a chance to read the judgment.

Mr. Justice Pennell said that in a field where only a few firms dominate the manufacture and distribution of similar items, "it may well be that price competition is the only real competition that is in any way beneficial to the public."

But the judge found that the firms "closely co-ordinated their actions and marched in lock step to create a working unit in control of the industry."

Prior to General Electric's introduction of a national sales plan in 1959, the three firms had gone through a period of intense price-cutting competition which had affected profits adversely, he said.

Quebec Facing Hydro Lawsuit

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Newfoundland will begin legal action against Quebec later this month in an attempt to obtain 800 megawatts of power from the Churchill Falls hydroelecric station in Labrador, Energy Minister John Crosbie said today.

Crosbie said a reply had been received from Churchill Falls Labrador Corp. to a demand by Newfoundland that the power be supplied.

VANDALS SMASH VACANT HOUSE

Vandals wrecked several rooms of a vacant house and an apartment was damaged and robbed in separate incidents this week.

City police said youths are believed to have entered a house at 837 Bay after tenants moved out Wednesday morning.

When police arrived about 8 p.m. Wednesday, the kitchen, living room, bathroom and three bedrooms were "completely demolished," an officer said.

Windows were broken, a refrigerator and stove were turned over, sections were torn from walls, bathroom fixtures were smashed and syrup was poured over most of the floors.

Damage was estimated at $5,000.

Neighbours said no windows were broken when the tenants left earlier Wednesday.

Tueday, vandals entered an apartment at 740 Burdett and slashed a bed, a couch, and two armchairs in the living room.

PWA to Be Taxed—Wolfe

The provincial government will move soon to make the Alberta-controlled Pacific Western Airlines subject to provincial corporation tax, Finance Minister Evan Wolfe said Thursday.

Wolfe estimated PWA would pay about $39,000 a year in taxes to B.C.

When the province of Alberta bought controlling interest in PWA two years ago, the company became a crown corporation and therefore was exempt from provincial corporation taxes under the Corporation Capital Tax Act.

However, Wolfe said, there is a section in the act which allows the cabinet to designate certain crown corporations as taxable.

"I will recommend to cabinet that PWA be made subject to this tax," he said.

Wolfe said such crown corporations as the CBC and Air Canada are designated as taxable.

B.C. is trying to get the Canadian Transport Commission to overrule PWA's planned move of offices and maintenance facilities from Vancouver to Alberta.

Also before the Supreme Court of Canada is a case which will decide whether Alberta's acquisition of the airline was legal.

greatly fears U.S. policy changes if Democratic presidential candidate Jimmy Carter is elected.

The Vorster government would like steps to be in motion before November to prevent a possible new administration from pulling out support for southern African detente. Thus the two leaders do not have the loose time frame allowed during Kissinger's "shuttle diplomacy" in the Middle East.

The urgency is reflected in the fact Kissinger has already indicated he may follow up the weekend meeting in Zurich with an immediate tour of black African countries, including Zaire, Zambia, Tanzania and Mozambique, with a possible stop in South Africa at the end.

Diplomats here agree that foundations of a "package deal" must be agreed on this weekend if the U.S. initiative is to be successful. A deal would have to include three general issues that affect all three countries: increased black rights or majority rule; protection of white minority rights; and securing continued Western ties in an area important for strategic, economic and political reasons.

The key topic this weekend is expected to be Rhodesia, where the United States and South Africa apparently agree that majority rule must be established within two years. The task will be to find terms that will satisfy both the defiant government of Prime Minister Ian Smith and the militant black nationalist guerrillas now waging war on the rebellious former British colony.

South Africa holds all the trump cards on this issue, since Rhodesia's economy, strangled by United Nations economic sanctions, is dependent on South Africa. Even a slight tightening of economic screws by South Africa would force the Rhodesians to succumb — a move on which Prime Minister Vorster has been hesitant for fear of repercussions from his own conservative white constituency.

Several diplomatic leaks have indicated that Kissinger is trying to work out a scheme involving guarantees and compensation for whites to provide for their security in "Zimbagwe," the African name for Rhodesia. This might also make any action by Vorster more acceptable to South African whites.

With an American "carrot" and a little "stick" from South Africa, the two leaders may feel they can convince the Rhodesian government of the benefits of rapid transition to black majority rule.

Propane Controls

antee they are making enough propane available to B.C. customers before they export.

The price of propane has soared in this area because of a shortage in the U.S. which produced a series of increases.

Johannessen said he has had meetings with representatives of all provinces west of the Maritimes as well as with federal officials on the propane question and the feeling appears to be unanimous that controls must come in as soon as possible.

Without controls, the retail price of propane rose by 23.6 cents a gallon from 1973 to mid-1975.

Producers got 12.8 cents, of which 10.2 cents was profit, he said. In addition, the retailers took a profit of another 7.6 cents after paying freight charges of 2.3 cents per gallon.

When the prices were soaring last year, the provincial government asked the commission to investigate and bring in this report, which was co-authored by Johannessen and Andrew Thompson, who in the interim has resigned as chairman of the commission.

The report shows propane users pay at least 25 per cent more for their fuel than other energy consumers. At present prices the average propane user will pay $600 this year while those using fuel oil would pay only $350 for the same amount.

Eight-Score Years of Life?

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Genetic scientists said Thursday that they may soon be able to reverse the aging process with chemicals that dissolve the tiny hooks that tie together genetic material within cells and make people grow old.

They predict a doubling of normal life expectancy from 80 to 160 years will become the norm.

"I'm not interested in gaining five years here and five years there, I'm shooting for the whole pot," said Dr. Johan Bjorksten of Madison, Wis., a pioneer in the study of aging.

He said that would be an average life expectancy of 800 years — the lifespan projected by the life insurance industry if everyone stayed as healthy as they are at age 16 years.

However, scientists realistically might hope for only 10 per cent success — adding 80 years to everyone's lifetime, he said.

Bjorksten told a news conference at the American Chemical Society meeting that aging occurs when two molecules in a gene, the basic unit of heredity, become hooked together by a process called cross-linking.

When molecules are linked in this way, the cells that contain the molecules do not function as well.

If they are skin cells, the skin becomes leathery; if they are cells of an artery, the artery loses its ability to expand and contract with the flow of blood, and this may lead to strokes and other diseases.

Scientists need to find an enzyme that will dissolve the bonds that link the molecules together, thereby reversing the aging process.

Bjorksten said one enzyme already has been found that seems to work in most cells, but it would be a miracle if the first one they tested turns out to be the answer.

Rolf Martin, a scientist from the City University of New York, said that with intensive research "I think we could have the thing done in five to 10 years."

Mac-Blo Takeover Rumors Flying

VANCOUVER (CP) — Executives of MacMillan Bloedel Ltd. cast doubt upon speculation Thursday that a takeover bid to gain control of the forest industry giant was under way.

"I just can't make out who would be doing this," said J. V. Clyne, director and former chairman of the company.

Speculation about the takeover bid began when the Toronto law firm of Davies, Ward and Beck — a firm specializing in company takeovers — acquired a shareholders' list from MacMillan Bloedel.

Industry sources said later that if someone is trying to take over MacMillan Bloedel it would likely be a Canadian company because a foreign company would have to contend with the Foreign Investment Review Agency.

One forest executive said the agency would more than likely not allow a takeover by a company other than a Canadian one.

Also, the Canadian company could not be dominant in the industry.

"That would cause problems with the federal government under its monopoly provisions," the industry spokesman said.

Some MacMillan Bloedel directors said the possibility of Canadian Pacific being behind the takeover bid is highly unlikely.

Canadian Pacific Investments, a CP subsidiary is MacMillan Bloedel's largest single shareholder. The second largest is the Quebec Pension Plan.

Beck, meanwhile is keeping a closed mouth on the subject.

"I'm not in a position to comment," he said from his Toronto office on Thursday. "I can't say why the list was obtained, or on whose behalf, or what the next step might be."

Outsiders were also puzzled by the move, although some discounted the significance of the request for a list. "Companies are being asked for lists of their shareholders all the time," said one investment man.

At the current market price of $22¼ (it rose 50 cents in Thursday's trading in Toronto and Vancouver), the company's 21.3 million outstanding shares have a total market value of close to $475 million. A bidder for control would not, of course, have to obtain all the shares.

Firemen Walk Out

HUDSON HOPE (CP) — The 30-man volunteer fire department in this northeastern British Columbia village resigned Thursday to protest the village's decision not to make up wages for firemen laid off from work for injuries suffered while fighting a fire.

Fire Chief Jim Murray said village council, at a recent meeting, had initially seemed responsive to a suggestion that the village make up the difference between a fireman's regular wages and amounts paid by the Workers' Compensation Board if the fireman was unable to work because of an unjury received firefighting.

But, he said, one fireman who received torn ligaments in his leg at a recent fire and is unable to work, went to the village office to pick up money he believed would be paid him, only to find he would not be paid.

The fireman was injured when he stepped backward into a hole which had been the site of a privy.

Council had decided to table the matter for a month while deciding if the money should be paid for a maximum of one month or indefinitely.

Murray said the firemen gave council until Sept. 2 to make a decision and "they didn't, so we have resigned."

Firemen would continue to operate the community's ambulance service and would respond to fire calls in which lives were endangered, he added.

FIRE-FIGHTING NIPPY WORK

MARQUETTE, Mich. (AP) — Crews fighting a forest fire north of Marquette had a strange request that was honored quickly Thursday.

The request was for firewood.

Regional fire supervisor Albert Livingstone said the crews at Hogback Mountain were even happy to return to the warmth of the fire lines this morning.

Officers Skunked

CALGARY (CP) — Two city constables searching for an armed suspect in a field were forced to beat a hasty retreat when fired on by an offended skunk.

A police spokesman said the officers did not try to apprehend their assailant after the surprise attack but decided instead to radio for replacements and a cure for thier malodorous condition.

"The skunk was fully in his rights" the spokesman said.

3 Commodity Gamblers Lost $100,000 in Day

TORONTO (CP) — Threee persons who lost almost $100,000 in one day on the commodity futures maket have been ordered to pay $60,432 they owe a securities company.

Mr. Justice John O'Driscoll of Ontario Supreme Court said Karol Fede, Thomas Bowers and Donald Hockney, whom he described as professors lecturers at the University of Western Ontario in London, Ont., must pay the money to Richardson Securities of Canada.

In his 27-page decision released this week, Mr. Justice O'Driscoll said that in February, 1973, the three successfully speculated in the futures market, dealing with contracts for silver, copper, platinum, cattle, pork bellies and soy beans.

They had studied and underlined a chapter entitled Commodity Futures, The Ideal Gamble in Dr. Morton Shulman's book, Anyone Can Still Make a Million.

The judge said they were ahead by $41,619 on March 1, 1973.

But they failed to accept the advice of their mentor, Dr. Morton Shulman, and riding a winner, they galloped ahead and bought before the contracts they held had generated the needed margin," the judge said.

Within a day, at the close of business on March 2, 1973, they were faced with a margin call of $55,000. They had lost almost $100,000 in one day.

The Juvenile Problem

Nanaimo Judge Stan Wardill's decision to fine the provincial child welfare superintendent because of a break-in committed by a ward of the province has forced politicians to sit up and take notice.

Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm says there is a need for some "disciplinary type facilities" with adequate security. Attorney-General Garde Gardom promised that he will move quickly to ensure that proper facilities for hard core juvenile facilities are established in B.C.

While it is interesting to note how one act of the judiciary can initiate paroxysms of activity and rhetoric among politicians, the sudden righteousness on the part of government and public could result in an overreaction. Not that the current Social Credit administration is particularly to blame for the situation. It is simply being forced to pick up the pieces from two previous administrations which absolutely refused to deal with the problem. The NDP went so far as to close down some juvenile facilities and former human resources minister Norman Levi vowed he would not put kids in jail. Levi was right to close down the outdated gothic facilities. And putting kids in jail is not going to clear up juvenile delinquency. The former Social Credit regime simply ignored the problem, as it did most social problems.

Now that the judicial gantlet has landed on the Bennett administration's doorstep something must be done, and done quickly for political purposes. Given the problem it is clear that detention facilities for 16 and 17-year-old offenders are badly needed. Because of lack of facilities and self-defeating laws it is difficult to deal with juvenile criminal actions. An offence is committed and the next day the juvenile is walking the streets, sometimes repeating the same offence. It is a well-publicized story. But as the general population grows older and young people become a minority, are we going to jail 12- and 13-year-olds? Are we so poverty-stricken in our collective imaginations that mere children must be jailed to satisfy justice?

Had the public seen the 13-year-old quaking juvenile delivered to the child welfare superintendent's office between two burly sheriff's deputies earlier this week on Judge Wardill's orders, a little compassion might have eroded the climate of punishment.

At any one time, there are about 9,500 juvenile wards of the province. Putting them all in some kind of facility would be unthinkable and clearly impossible. As Vander Zalm says, a whole range of facilities is required to provide training and rehabilitation. They cannot be provided overnight after 30 years of neglect.

The provincial government should refuse to be part of an emotional stampede, and should make some carefully considered judgments before it starts setting bars in concrete or building high walls.

Meanwhile, Judge Wardill has done the province a service by bringing this problem into public focus. Perhaps the judiciary should do this more often. They seem to get a lot more reaction than the public from its elected representatives.

Austerity Marches On

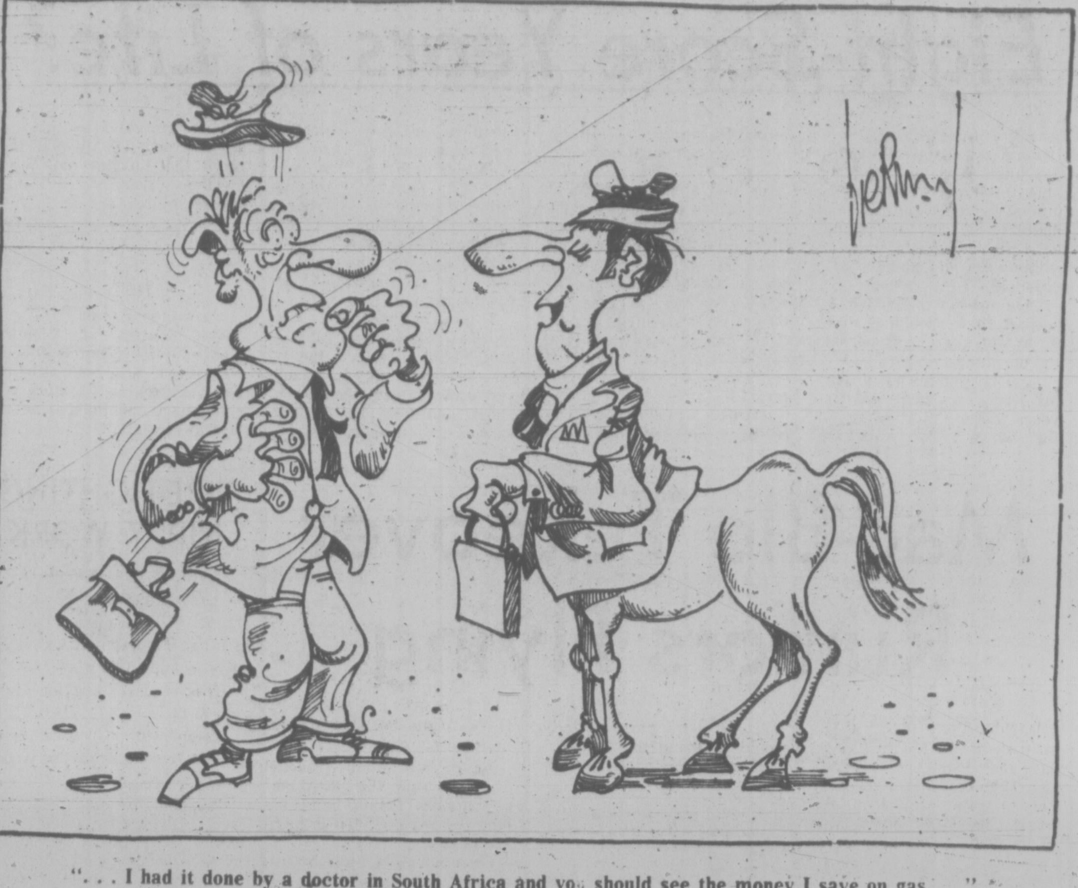
Were you comforted by the news leak Tuesday that Ottawa is preparing a big public relations push to demonstrate that, yes indeed, the feds are cutting costs to the bone too, suffering along with ordinary Canadians? No?

From personal experience, we can assure that at least Ottawa is trying. The Anti-Inflation Board, for example, sends out press releases with printing on both sides of the paper. A suitably cheap grade of paper, too, almost transparent.

And top mandarins in the finance department who are meeting in annual pre-parliament conclave have gathered this week in an Ottawa-area army barracks. Last year, before the Trudeau administration discovered inflation, they met at a Laurentian mountain resort town.

The Trudeaus' summer vacation, while not your bargain gamblers' special to Reno, also reflects the stern cost-cutting mood now abroad in the land. Pleading poverty and national austerity, no doubt, Prime Minister Trudeau wangled an invitation aboard the Aga Khan's yacht in the Mediterranean.

Vancouver Island residents who sacrificed a ferry trip and an outing at the PNE for at-home vacation must be heartened by the example of executive penny-pinching. Even Mines Minister Tom Waterland's aides flew economy to a Newfoundland mines conference although the minister was observed sitting in the first class section on the Victoria-Vancouver run Who said government didn't care about the taxpayers' dollar?



". . . I had it done by a doctor in South Africa and you should see the money I save on gas . . ."

FRANK RUTTER

Three Canadians for Nader

WASHINGTON — Three Canadian students who spent the summer as interns here at Ralph Nader's Centre for Study of Responsive Law have returned to Dalhousie University in Halifax not only enriched in their own vocation but with positive contributions to the art of government in Canada.

These young people, all in their 20s, did not take long to perceive some of the inherent weaknesses in the way Canada conducts both its own public business and its relations with the United States.

Within Canada this is the gap between government and the public. In the U.S. it is a gap between Ottawa and American institutions as well as the public.

All of the students were impressed during their three-month internship with the availability of information in U.S. government — in comparison to the lack of it in Canada.

Information problems ran as a thread through their reports on three widely differing subjects: Ian McLeod's paper on the environmental dispute about the Garrison water diversion project in North Dakota, Kenzie MacKinnon's paper on the U.S. Freedom of Information Act and Elizabeth McLeod's paper on nuclear power, which has not yet been published.

Recruited by Nader

The three were paid a $700 stipend and turned loose on these subjects with the assistance and encouragement, but a minimum of imposed structure, from Nader's wide-ranging organization.

They were "recruited" when Nader went to Halifax in February to make a speech. He usually ends such addresses to student groups by challenging volunteers to come to Washington and work with him.

"For some reason he just hadn't got any response in Canada but we were so impressed by his talk that we went up afterwards and he said, 'Come on down'," MacKinnon recalled. The only other Canadian to have worked with Nader until this summer was Ken Dryden, the famous hockey goalkeeper, but he was attending an American college at the time.

MacKinnon's lengthy analysis of freedom of information legislation includes a refreshing commentary on the attitudes of Canadian officials which is especially pointed in view of the government's indication that a white paper and draft bill will be forthcoming at the next session of parliament.

MacKinnon cited numerous examples of similar or identical information which could be obtained through U.S. government sources after having been refused in Canada. Some of it was innocuous: Secretary of State Hugh Faulkner's refusal to tell how much the CBC spent on a corporate logo was contrasted with the speedy response of the U.S. Public Broadcasting System that it spent $7,001.82.

Some of it was serious: Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan's refusal to release reports of inspectors at meat packing plants contrasted with the public report available here which criticized unsanitary conditions at Canada Packers plant in Toronto.

MacKinnon spells out some of the attitudes of ministers and top civil servants as a warning about possible attempts to water down any Canadian legislation, quoting Mitchell Sharp's contention that "the government has the right to decide what it will answer" and Allan MacEachen's bland assurance that "one must assume that the truth is being told."

There are plenty of recent examples, from Watergate on, of instances where such dogmas have been found wanting in the U.S.

RALPH NADER
. . . challenged students

McLeod, in his pungent report on the Garrison dispute, writes in sorrow of Canada's missed opportunities to scotch a project that threatens extensive pollution in Manitoba. Canadian government environmental officials had been warning Ottawa since 1969, but "Canada has allowed herself to be carried along the leisurely and genteel path of the diplomatic process."

This process allowed 10 months just to negotiate a reference to the International Joint Commission, which could have been assigned to settle the dispute seven years ago but now will not come up with a recommendation until June next year, by which time the project may be unstoppable.

McLeod makes three good proposals for dealing with such bilateral problems — the IJC should be beefed up with more power to handle disputes earlier, Canada should look beyond the U.S. state department in pressing its point of view and the Canadian embassy should maintain an effective liaison with the U.S. congress.

The Garrison project offers classic evidence of the failure to recognize the second and third points. In June, 1975, congress was to take a key vote on appropriations for the project.

Ottawa was aware of this and drafted a note for "congressional eyes." But the note was routed via the state department and was not seen by members of congress until the day after the vote.

"Every day the American legislature, constitutionally independent from the executive, takes actions which may affect Canada in a serious way," wrote McLeod. "Direct and persistent contacts with members of that body, provided that we maintain the proper courtesy of informing the state department of our actions, would do much to help members of that body, many of whom have only the friendliest regard for Canada, to deal knowledgeably with matters affecting the two nations."

Tell Everyone

McLeod said she found during her work on nuclear power, that she was frequently running into the territory covered by MacKinnon in his treatise on freedom of information. This is a subject on which the Canadian government, even more than the U.S., has proved to be especially reticent.

No one is suggesting that Canada adopt U.S. models in its information systems. But these three students learned more in three months here than they could ever hope to learn in the warrens of Ottawa.

There is a basic attitude in the Canadian government which adopts secrecy as the most convenient posture. This has its effect not only on citizens at home who deserve to be informed but also on relations with the U.S., where the record is replete with causes on which the dissemination of information sooner and more efficiently would have been in Canada's better interest. They have ranged over the past three years from pipelines to potash, tankers to beef, energy to broadcasting.

As Canada continues its efforts to achieve economic and social independence from massive U.S. influences, this is something for the government to keep in mind — the actions taken may be within Canada's sovereign boundaries, but the effects and implications are felt elsewhere and they are liable to be the more abrasive when the government is the less informative.

Victorian Bigotry

A woman is hired as a cashier then laid off from a large, well-known furniture store because a customer from Oak Bay complained to management about the employee's accent. (I wonder what kind of accent the customer had?)

Some of our children in school (including one of my own) are still called discriminatory names by some either ignorant or bigoted children.

Shame on Victoria for allowing things like this to still happen? I thought Canada was a cosmopolitan place to live. — Mrs. A. Suzuki, Victoria.

Victoria Institution

I'd like to take this opportunity to pass along sincere thanks and congratulations to Jerry Gosley and the cast of his summer Smile Show. They performed their last show Saturday and anyone who hasn't enjoyed their singing, dancing and hilarious comedy this summer, has, in my opinion, missed a lot.

It does my heart good to know that almost everyone in the cast is a local entertainer and believe me, I've passed that tidbit of information along to every out-of-towner I've taken to the show.

The Smile Show is a Victoria institution and deserves a thank you from each and every Victorian — they give us a good name. — Mrs. H. Johnson, 2230 Cadboro Bay Road.

Freedom's Gone

As a Canadian I wonder what is happening to my Canada. Yes, mine and millions of others like me. No my country is no longer free. I believe that Mr. Trudeau and senile old men who "represent" the people are growing fat off the riches of our land. Trudeau and his people have no qualms about passing laws that favor a minority or pass laws that "protect" Canadiana. In a time in history when other nations are expanding, yes, moving ahead, Canada is closing its doors, turning inward to herself, to find herself and her true identity, so he says.

It disgusts me to see what our foreign policy has been towards our neighbor, the United States. When we were young and no one wanted to help us grow, the Yankee dollar was gladly accepted and even cherished! In this day and age, cooperation is the name of the game, not making enemies. Whether we like to admit it or not, the Americans help make us what we are.

True, Canada is a great country, but she's still growing, still just a child. As a leader, I believe Trudeau has lost all insight into diplomacy and reality. I believe that Trudeau and his so-called leadership are detrimental to this country. He has infringed on my freedom to a point where I can no longer be quiet. I am now told what can watch, what I can listen to and no doubt soon, what to do and where to go.

When he was confronted by a CBC reporter concerning a poll taken which stated that the majority of Canadian people were in favor of capital punishment, he said that he didn't care what the people want, the elected representatives voted for it. Since the majority of the House of Commons is Liberal it is evident that he dictated to them what he wanted and not what the Canadian people want.

Also, in Fortune magazine he stated that he couldn't understand why the Canadian banks were mad at him — he had done so much for them. That's right Mr. Trudeau, the banks keep making more money and the Canadian people are forced to pay ridiculous interest rates and no tax relief to offset the people's loss. Canadian people should know that in the U.S. mortgage interest payments are dedutible! If you're so eager to change things, change the tax system.

I have always been an ardent Liberal supporter, but on election day I shall remember what wonderful laws he has passed to protect my rights and freedoms. The irony of it is a criminal has more rights than a law abiding citizen. Thank God we can still vote, or will that be gone too? — L. G. Morgan, 4008 White Rock Street.

Useful Buildings

Mr. Chisholm, in his letter of Aug. 30 in your paper, equates saving heritage buildings with "living in the past." If he lived in Victoria in 1923 he probably voted to build the Crystal Garden, loudly proclaimed at that time to be "a building the city could be proud of." The Crystal Garden was advertised as bringing visitors to Victoria all year round, just exactly as a convention centre is promoted today.

It is nonsense to say that saving a useful building for future use is "living in the past." No one is trying to live in the past so far as I am aware. And if anything, preservationists are looking even further ahead than Mr. Chisholm to a time when brick buildings will be impossible to build because of the energy required to bake the bricks. How much energy was expended in the bricks of the Crystal? As long as the building stands, that energy is stored and used. When the building goes down, even if some of the bricks are salvaged, the energy lost will be lost forever. Energy conservation is not a concern of the past, but it certainly is of the present. That too is progress.

Romanticists like Mr. Chisholm seem to think that the fossilization of monuments like Helmcken House, and the expensive "replication" of an idealized version of the past as portrayed in the provincial museum represent "our heritage and our memories." They do not. Our heritage buildings are neither fossils nor rose-tinted memories. They are working members of our society fulfilling useful functions in a modern world and only by their appearance giving a depth to our sense of time and a variety to our urban landscape.

It is not the "heritage bugs" who are living in the past, It is the Mr. Chisholms of this world who still think of this as a throwaway society of endless resources where nothing is good unless it is brand new. Let us look forward by all means! Let us convert the Crystal Garden to a convention centre if need be. But let us not be so foolish as to think that we should be any prouder of a new building than a revitalized old one — Carolyn [illegible]myly, Past-President, Hallmark Society, Former Curator of History, Provincial Museum, Former Governor, Heritage Canada, 4354 Wilkinson Road.

Ridicule Upsetting

I am somewhat taken aback at the levity of your brief editorial of Aug. 30 (Day of the Living Dead) in which you gently poke fun at the former attorney-general, Alex Macdonald. Mr. Macdonald expressed his concern over the "living dead," individuals who by the simple expedient of applying for the birth certificate of a deceased Canadian citizen assumed that person's identity.

If my memory serves me correctly, we have had two disturbing instances within the fairly recent past in which this very thing happened. Some time ago a Russian spy was apprehended using the passport of one Gordon Lonsdale, who was born in Ontario but journeyed to Europe where he disappeared. The Russian presumably had no trouble in obtaining Lonsdale's birth certificate and, subsequently a passport which was of considerable help to him in his clandestine activities for the USSR.

More recently, the convicted murderer of Martin Luther King Jr. was also able to obtain the birth certificate of a deceased Canadian by the simple expedient of picking a name from the birth notices of an appropriately old newspaper. He then, as I recall, readily obtained a Canadian passport with which he travelled to the UK where he was later arrested. An investigation following the arrest indicated that obtaining a Canadian passport was something of an international joke, and steps were taken to make it more difficult to obtain such an important document.

In the light of events such as these, I am concerned at your ridicule of Mr. Macdonald. Personally, I find the situation rather more upsetting. On the other hand, perhaps I just don't have your sharply honed sense of humor. — Disturbed.

Clean Fun

I am forced to disagree with an article in the Times, Aug. 28 by Nora Hutchison, condemning the movie, That's Entertainment. Such an article in our estimation should not have been published, because it was a very lovely picture, pure clean entertainment. A great pity that more such films could not be shown, in spite of people like Nora Hutchison. Apparently she does not enjoy good clean entertainment. Many of us do, and we aren't fuddy duddies either. — E. A. Birley, 106-1020 Park Boulevard.

Minivitamins

Your editorial on raw milk (Raw Deal, Aug. 2) was very much to the point, but just a small matter. The health food stores were never, as far as I know, in the business of selling "megavitamins." They do sell vitamin pills and powders, however, The strength of these pills has been limited for at least two years. Some of their vitamin A pills were far above what is safe in unprescribed doses. But megavitamins as such are always sold in pharmacies. health food stores in general deal in "natural vitamins" and these don't reach the required potency to knock out such maladies as schizophrenia. The vitamins sold in health food stores are extremely mild. It is a matter of choice whether you prefer dessicated liver tablets to Geritol, or rose hip tablets to 25 mgs of straight ascorbic acid. — Monica Oldham, 511 Victoria Avenue.

Old California Bones Upset Some Old Theories

By BOYCE RENSBERGER

LA JOLLA, Calif. — On a grassy bluff 325 feet above the Pacific ocean beach a team of scientists and students is digging up evidence of what life was like for a people who are believed to have lived here 40,000 to 50,000 years ago.

Their archeological excavations are part of a revolution that has been underway for several years in the understanding of how and when man first entered the New World.

Until recently, it had been a virtual dogma among American archeologists that the peopling of North and South America began 12,000 to 20,000 years ago when bands of big game hunters crossed the Bering land bridge from Siberia into Alaska.

In recent years, however, new archeological discoveries and a new way to date fossil bones have yielded substantial evidence that man's antiquity in the Americas may reach back 70,000 or more years.

One implication of the new findings is that modern man reached the New World long before he reached Europe. In fact, as matters stand now, the oldest known skeletal examples of modern man anywhere in the world come from California. It is believed that modern man originated somewhere in the Middle East and still older bones may someday be found there.

Ironically, some of the best new clues have come from bones that were discovered half a century ago and have been lying in museums ever since. Although various anthropologists over the years had suggested that man entered the New World more than 12,000 years ago, their evidence failed to persuade most anthropologists.

Then, in 1974, a young La Jolla chemist named Jeffrey Bada created an uproar in anthropology by applying his own method of dating to some of the museum bones. He found one of them — a distinctly modern looking skull from an oceanside cliff in nearby Del Mar — to be a startling 48,000 years old. The oldest known examples of modern man, sometimes called Cro-Magnon Man, from anywhere else are about 40,000 years old. Another set of human bones from La Jolla turned out to match in age the oldest Cro-Magnon remains from the Old World.

The place in Del Mar from which the older bones came has since been destroyed but the La Jolla site remains at least partly intact.

"When I was asked if I wanted to dig the La Jolla site, I thought about it for maybe a second and a half," said Dr. Jason W. Smith, a young archeologist from California State University at Northridge.

"I think we can lay the 12,000-year myth to rest. I don't care how old the La Jolla site is, as long as it's more than 12,000 years. Once that's established, then we can get on with the much more interesting questions about how they lived and who they were." Smith is the author of a new test called "Foundations of Archeology."

Although a number of sites believed to be older than 12,000 years are known, they contain either human bones without stone tools or they yield only crude artifacts without human remains to vertify them as manmade. Smith is hoping to find both together in unambiguous stratigraphic association.

For all the dust rolling out the straight-walled, square pits as Smith's students patiently chip and brush in the hot sun, the location might as well be a remote and desolate wasteland. In fact, it is a wealthy, residential suburb of La Jolla. More specifically it is the back yard of the chancellor of the University of California at San Diego, on a narrow strip of land between his swimming pool and the edge of the bluff overlooking the ocean.

The site is where, according to 50-year-old field notes, the 40,000-year-old bones had come. Before beginning to dig, Smith and the project's co-director, Dr. Gail Kennedy, an expert on fossil bones from the University of California at Los Angeles, walked over the ground and down the crumbling hillside to see whether erosion had exposed any more fossils or artifacts.

It had. They found a number of chipped stones, some crudely flaked and evident only to a trained eye as primitive stools and a few beautifully sculptured into unmistakable points and knives.

Because they had eroded out of the level at which they were dropped by their makers or users, there was no way to know how old they were. Stone tools can be dated reliably only when they are found in clear association with other things which are directly datable, such as bones. Such associations are found by digging very carefully in undisturbed earth and recording the exact location of each object found.

"Where you find one artifact, there's usually more," said Smith. "We opened up a pit and luck was with us."

With stakes and string, Smith and his students marked off the ground into a checkerboard of squares, each two meters on a side, and began digging in nonadjacent squares. The idea is both to sample the area widely without having to dig up everything and to leave part of the area intact for future scientists who, as Smith put it, "know more than we do."

The digging is done in stages, proceeding down one 10-centimeter layer at a time. Using trowels, ice picks and delicately handled shovels, the dirt is loosened. When a large object is noticed, the digging shifts to smaller tools such as dental picks and brushes to remove the dirt without disturbing the object.

All the loosened dirt is shoveled into a sieve, or screen, next to the pit, where another person sifts the dirt searching for small bones, teeth or stone flakes that might have been missed.

About two feet down in the La Jolla pits, excavators encountered a number of rocks — some rounded cobbles and some chipped into tools — and bits of bone. It was what archeologists call a living floor — an old land surface on which people had once lived at least long enough to leave signs of their presence.

Some of the bone was given to Bada for dating with his new technique, called amino acid racemization. The bones were between 7,000 and 8,000 years old. Without Bada's method, the living floor could not have been dated for the only other method, carbon-14, consumes as much as a pound of bone and no one bone was that big. Bada's method works on a fraction of an ounce. Until now much archeological evidence remained undated because the researcher was unwilling to destroy it in the process.

Also, the carbon-14, or radiocarbon, method is useless for materials older than about 40,000 years whereas racemization can date objects up to about a million years old.

The new method is based on the fact that amino acids, the building blocks of proteins, can exist in two chemically identical forms that, in structure, are mirror images of one another. In analytic devices, one form will deflect polarized light to the left while the other form deflects it to the right.

Women as Priests: 2,000 Years of Tradition Against It

By JOHN HOLWAY

(Free-lance writer John Holway wrote this interview for the Washington Post with Rev. Alison Cheek, one of first 11 women ordained Episcopal priests in Philadelphia in 1974. The ceremony was controversial and irregular because ordination of women had been rejected by the General Convention of the Episcopal Church and is still being debated.)

Question: Other Protestant churches have not had a great deal of difficulty in hurdling this idea of women ministers. But a Catholic priest told me that that's because, in his opinion, the Mass, as it's observed by the Catholic and the Anglican churches, is quite different from the communion of th other Protestant churches. Do you know what he meant by that?

Answer: Theologically, there isn't this great difference. Nevertheless, I think there is a mystique around the word "priest," and that it carries very different connotations than when people say "minister." He may be thinking that there is a place in the liturgy in which the priest represents God and another place where the priest represents the people. And some people are very hung up on the masculinity of Jesus and on the analogue of God as Father.

Q: For the most part most of the Catholic hierarchy feel that the priest is representing the prescence of Jesus. It's difficult for a woman to have this effect. Because of the way they see the priesthood, it should be male only.

A: Yes, I know they talk that way, but it just doesn't make the slightest bit of sense to me. I mean, if Jesus was not representing full humanity, why then let's not baptize little girls or women — we don't belong in that club. I think it's neat to be looking at a woman priest, because it sort of forces people to realize that God is beyond sex or sexual distinction. That unhooks you from turning an analogue or a metaphor into something very literal.

Q: Bishop Robert Terwilliger of Dallas feels that Jesus broke with a lot of the Jewish traditions of his day and defied them, at a great deal of risk, but one tradition he never broke with was the tradition of male priests. And He chose His 12 disciples after long prayer, and it was not just a casual willy-nilly decision. It was a matter of principle, Terwilliger feels. Therefore, he feels, this tradition is not just accidental, it's part of God's plan.

A: I think that's a somewhat naive reading of the biblical material. Jesus had more than 12 apostles, he sent out more than 12 people. Obviously, this is all very symbolic and stands for the 12 tribes of Israel. And it would be sort of unthinkable at that time in a patriarchal culture that a woman headed the tribe. But I think it's pretty obvious in biblical literature that the early Christians, and maybe Jesus Himself, expected the Second Coming within the lifetime of the first believers. So the whole thing about priests is a much later development.

Q: The National Conference of Catholic Bishops addressed this problem three or four years ago. They said that this matter of 2,000 years of tradition is "of ponderous theological importance." And they reasoned that, if the Lord had wanted to change it, He wouldn't have permitted it to continue for 2,000 years.

A: I wonder why they feel He permitted slavery to exist for so long. I feel that St. Paul saw implicitly what the Christ event brought with it, the oft-quoted passage from Galations, where he says, "In Christ there is no Jew nor Gentile, bond nor free man, male nor female." The only part of that which became explicit in his lifetime was the Jew-Gentile thing. Of the three dualities, that was the only one he existentially was forced to face. The others have taken a long time to be made explicit. It's only recently that we've given up slavery. And I think that in this century the male-female thing will become explicit in a much more definitive kind of way.

There's an enormous misogynist tradition in the Christian church, under which I believe lies a very deep-rooted fear of female sexuality.

Q: An argument that's often used by the opponents of women's ordination is that it's not a matter of rights, of justice; they say nobody, men nor women, have a right to be a priest, it's a calling and therefore the question of justice for women isn't the issue at all.

A: It is a calling, and it is wrong and unjust to deny women the right to have their call tested. Everybody in the church has the right to having his or her call tested, or the right to fulfil their potential.

Q: Do you feel that maybe the movement for women's ordination is a small elitist movement? How wide is the upsurge of support from the bottom for this?

A: Very, very hard to determine, because many women today sort of stay close-mouthed and under the woodwork. And the ones who are more active and more vocal mostly lead.

Q: When I go to church I notice that well over half the people are always women — 60-70 per cent, it seems to me. Why can't women elect themselves to vestries and take more leadership in the government of their church?

A: I think it's because historically women have been taught to mistrust each other. The whole thing with women has been so competitive, you competed to get a man to take care of you. And this has been sort of the big discovery of the women's movement, that women have begun to bond together in sisterhood and to support each other, rather than to compete with each other, put each other down. But that seems to have taken hold much more in the secular world than in the church. Now the church has been very clear that women are subordinate, so that if you band together and say "not so," you're challenging a lot of spiritual authority. I'm sympathetic with women for whom it is scary. I've lived through that. When I went to seminary, I wasn't much for confronting. I wanted to be liked. So it was quite some time before I learned that I even had a vocation — owned to myself that I had a vocation to the priesthood. It was just very hard for me to stand over against all that conditioning and all the hostility that hits you as soon as you challenge the male standards.

Q: Do you think that the Christian church can survive as it is for another century or so?

A: I hope so. But some very profound changes are going to have to take place. I think that what's happening with women is very radical, and the church hasn't recognized that. They think it's just women's rights or women's libbers, or something like that. There are two things: There is the justice thing; it is a moral issue. But much more than that it's an issue of full personhood. And if the church is not going to affirm the full personhood of women, then it's not going to be a place where many women are going to want to be.

Down to the Gross Roots

russell baker

Watching the reporters take off in battalion strength for Plains, Ga., this summer to search for the roots of Jimmy Carter, I finally realized why I have always shrunk from running for president. Splendid though the honor would be, I wouldn't dream of subjecting my home crossroads to the indignities which necessarily occur when the press descends in force to do its sociological study of the candidate's roots.

It would surely take these ferrets no more than a day or two to unearth the fact that, as a toddler, one of my most memorable achievements was the discovery that my Uncle Sims hid his whisky in a Mason jar behind the barrel of whitewash in the rear of my grandmother's house. Or that my grandmother, on being shown the evidence by me, threw the whisky on the woodpile and gave Uncle Sims such a lecture that he never touched the stuff again for several days.

* * *

Uncle Sims is dead now and beyond public humiliation, but I cherish his memory too closely to want to see the story laid out in Newsweek under an old snapshot of him, merely to authenticate my early rustic credentials for the presidency.

Moreover, since the episode occurred during Prohibition, making his possession of the stuff a criminal enterprise, and since the only surviving snapshots of Uncle Sims show him with a several days' growth of whiskers, he would be bound to emerge from the presentation as a distinctly sinister character.

He was not, of course. Almost everybody at the crossroads who was male shared his taste for moonshine, while almost everybody who was female spent a good bit of time emptying Mason jars on woodpiles. I shudder to imagine what character assassinations this would produce in the press encampment, and now that I think of it, I am not altogether certain it would help my campaign to have The Chicago Tribune discover that the first skill I mastered was capping the bottles of my father's home-brew.

The exception to the prevailing contempt for the 18th Amendment was Uncle Wilton. He was a church deacon and a Republican, which was permissible, at least for deacons, in this particular region of the shallow South. In 1928 he had persuaded my Uncle Lester to vote for Herbert Hoover, and when the Depression arrived shortly afterward, Uncle Lester held Uncle Wilton personally responsible for it.

I don't know what the network sleuths would make of the fact that for years thereafter Uncle Lester never spoke to Uncle Wilton except in anger, but I suspect there would be nasty suggestions that ours was an eccentric family. This would be totally misleading.

Although not a member of the Peace Corps like Mrs. Lillian Carter, my mother was equally adventurous and taught school in an area that was always called "up there along the mountain." Through her school connections, one of my earliest companions became a boy named "Eleven." Eleven was his parent's 11th-born child. When he came along they were at a loss for a name they hadn't already used, and so they decided to improvise.

I don't know what became of Eleven. All I know is that I don't want to be sitting before the television some night surrounded by Secret Service men when suddenly Mike Wallace appears, interviewing a man named Eleven about my early deficiencies as a maker of mud pies. I'd rather not be president.

Nor do I want to pick up The New York Times and read a full description of my grandmother's various supernatural beliefs. These would boubtless strike the contemporary electorate as amusingly batty, and there was nothing, absolutely nothing, batty about my grandmother. She was a force of nature, and she lived in a world of coal-oil lamps that made night a time of grotesque shadows. Lighting her way to bed one night, she saw her long-dead son, Ernest, on the stairs, and when she returned to report it to a room of adults, no one laughed.

Once, a bird came down the chimney and flew into the house and she announced that it was an omen that someone would die, and no one laughed that time either. Dying was still a commonplace then. Antibiotics were still undiscovered, and even the young lived in dread of pneumonia, fevers, blood poisoning.

All this is just a moment back in time, before rural electrification and asphalt paving finally finished off rustic America for good, yet it already seems a world away. I wouldn't want the political reporters digging it up to find my roots. They are fiercely capable fellows when it comes to finding the Uncle Lesters of America, but they are not geared for the important things, like detecting the way a June morning smelled in 1934 or what the wind sounded like in the chimney that December.

New York

Brokers noted no special news to account for the market's slight upward tendency.

They said a few traders might be buying in hopes of a market revival after the Labor Day weekend, which traditionally marks the "business New Year."

In the economic news, the U.S. government reported that the unemployment rate rose from 7.8 to 7.9 per cent in August for its third straight monthly increase.

And New York's Citibank kept its prime lending rate at seven per cent. There had been some faint hopes that the bank would reduce the key rate on blue chip loans.

Central and South West, the most active NYSE issue, was unchanged at $16.

Among glamors, IBM rose 1⅝ to $278; Digital Equipment added 1⅞ to 165¼, and Philip Morris was ahead ⅝ to $58.

MONTREAL (CP) — Prices were mixed in moderate trading Friday on the Montreal Stock Exchange.

London

POOL FIRM GOES OFF DEEP END

TORONTO (CP) — A major Canadian manufacturer of swimming pools, Fanta-Sea Swim Centres Ltd. of Hamilton, has gone into receivership in a move which might affect the warranties of more than 5,000 pool owners in Ontario and Quebec.

Larry Clinesmith, president of First Empire Financial Services Ltd. of Toronto, financial backers of Fanta-Sea, said that the company, a wholly-owned subsidiary of Fanta-Sea Swim Centres Inc. of Clarence, N.Y., was placed in contractual receivership Aug. 19 by First Empire.

Clinesmith said he does not know what will happen to customers' pool warranties but will advise the firms involved to make a statement to answer several enquiries. Fanta-Sea has been operating in Ontario and Quebec for five years.

A typical warranty on steel frame construction for a pool is up to 15 years but warranties on liners are for considerably shorter periods.

Refinancing Prepared For Nfld. Refinery

ST. JOHN'S (UPI) — A refinancing plan providing some $615 million to reopen and expand the Come-By-Chance oil refinery complex controlled by New York businessman John Shaheen is nearing completion, according to oil sources.

The plan, which also provides financial backing for the construction of a petrochemical plant adjoining the refinery, is expected to be announced by the end of the year. It could come shortly.

Former Newfoundland premier Joseph Smallwood, who was instrumental in the establishment of the refinery, told UPI he expects the refinancing arrangement will be "signed, sealed and delivered by Christmas."

Platt's Oilgram, an oil industry trade publication, reported last week the refinancing, which it said totalled $617 million, would be announced shortly. The plan will be financed by a group of European banks, Platt's said.

The Come-By-Chance refinery opened in 1973 but was plagued by production and financial troubles which led to its shutdown earlier this year. Major creditors moved in late February to force the refinery into receivership despite attempts by Shaheen to block the action.

Shaheen has a variety of business interests, including announced plans to publish a new afternoon newspaper in New York City.

A spokesman for Natural Resources Co. said the company had no comment on the reported financing plans.

Smallwood, premier from 1949 to 1972, said he expected Shaheen, after financing arrangements are completed, to rebuild a defective hydrogen unit at the refinery which had been a major cause of the production problems.

"That will cost between $20 and $40 million and it will take a few months to do but it (the refinery) will be in full production by midwinter," Smallwood said, adding that construction of the petrochemical plant then would begin.

Smallwood estimated the cost of paying off the refinery debts, making the repairs and building the new plant would be $615 million.

"I have enormous confidence in him," Smallwood said of Shaheen.

"We meet fairly often and we talk from time to time and I'm quite certain he will carry out his plans."

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO (AP) — Soybean futures bulled ahead more than 10 cents a bushel in the final minutes on the Chicago Board of Trade today and influenced a rally in most other commodities on the exchange.

Corn futures were up as much as 3 cents a bushel and declines in wheat and oats were sharply trimmed. Soybean meal advanced $4 a ton. Soybean oil, down about ½ cent a pound early, closed about ¼ lower.

All commodities were lower early in the trade under profit-taking by recent longs and rather active commercial selling. Prices then moved in narrow ranges in all of the pits as the pace slowed down into a normal pre-holiday pattern. Late in the session, however, the routine changed.

At the close, soybeans were 7¾ to 10½ cents a bushel higher, September 7.10; corn was ½ lower to 3 higher, September 2.90½; oats were 1¾ lower to ½ higher, September 1.68 and wheat was 1 to 2¼ lower, September 3.19.

CP Air's Move Indication of Woes

VANCOUVER (CP) — The shifting of CP Air's corporate offices from downtown to cheaper accommodation at the airline's operations centre at Vancouver International Airport is an indication of the money woes facing Canada's second largest air carrier.

CP Air had losses in the first half of 1976 of $11.3 million, compared with a loss of $6.7 million in the same period of 1975.

Moving head office is just one money-saving step the airline is taking, along with flight reductions on some routes, merger of marketing, sales and customer services divisions and a change in aircraft seating.

CP Air president Ian Gray said the airline is "looking at all our routes to ascertain the best way to serve the markets."

He said he hopes to reduce the 1976 first-half loss through the belt-tightening, along with increased summer traffic profits, to less than the total 1975 loss of $6.4 million, the first in 13 years for the airline.

Labor strife was a major contributor to the airline's losses this year.

CP Air estimates it lost about $3 million during the nine-day work stoppage by pilots and air traffic controllers in the June battle over use of French.

A strike earlier this year by Mexican cabin crew halted the airline's lucrative flights to Mexico, costing an estimated $4 million in lost revenue and layoff payments.

The airline plans to resume service to Mexico Oct. 31 but only to Mexico City.

Mr. Gray said the company is considering cutting South American flights to one a week instead of three and changing flight schedules to Europe.

European flights by CP Air have been hit hard by competition, much of it from state-owned airlines prepared to sell tickets at a loss.

For example, CP Air had a monopoly on flights to Madrid from Canada but now has competition from Iberia, the Spanish state airline.

Mr. Gray said the airline is reluctant to drop services entirely because it might lose some permanently to Air Canada and the government might look with a jaundiced eye on abandoning the only Canadian flights into other countries.

CP Air is cutting back its domestic services by dropping its overnight flight to Montreal from Vancouver because, Mr. Gray said, "it was the least profitable flight and we could reassign the plane to greater advantage."

By March, 1977, all seats will be economy on Boeing 737s used on cross-country multiple-stop routes.

Security Broker Back in Business

VANCOUVER (CP) — Fisher Securities Ltd., a brokerage firm specializing in speculative securities on the Vancouver Stock Exchange, has had its registration re-instated.

Water Weed Threat Spreading

KELOWNA (CP) — The entire Okanagan and Columbia River valley systems, the Shuswap, and eventually even the lower regions of the Fraser River face suffocation by the Eurasian water milfoil weed, Frank Colclough of Penticton, Okanagan water basin board chairman, said Thursday.

"The weed is already moving down the Okanagan toward the Columbia River system," he said at a board meeting "a piece of it on one power boat propeller could carry it into the Shuswap where it would take hold and if that happened, it would spread right down the Fraser Valley system."

The board secretary-manager Bill Parchomcuk, who warned several years ago of the weed's devastating potential, said the weed can survive in saline river water.

In the Okanagan, he said, unless dealt with, the weed will inevitably fill all the beaches used by people until it has nowhere else to go. He described Skaha Lake as already lost to the weed and in addition to the Ilanadan and Skaha, it was also apparent in Vaseaux, Kalamalka and other lakes in the system.

Osoyoos Lake was still free but he expected the weed to continue its march down the valley and attack Osoyoos Lake next year.

Parchomcuk said use of the herbicide 24-D has been essential in the fight against the weed. This herbicide is harmless to humans, he said, and had been used for years in gardens as a dandelion killer, but he said fish and game clubs and government agencies were reluctant and opposed to use of the herbicide.

"Here we sit back helplessly while efforts to get the necessary government permission to use the herbicide runs into miles of red tape.

"In spite of the success of our prototype weed-fighting machines we are still losing ground. The Okanagan is still manageable if we use the machines. But if we cleared 95 per cent of the weeds in a year, which we could not do without use of herbicides, the remaining amount, five per cent, would be enough to reseed the same area the next year."

Ald Jim Stuart of Kelowna claimed that the problem was too much for the Central Okanagan Regional District to handle alone. He said it was a government problem and an international problem.

"We haven't got the resources to fight it. We're like a little guy with a toothpick trying to move a mountain of these weeds," he said.

$4,000 THEFT, MAN 'BOOKED'

VANCOUVER (CP) — About $4,000 worth of books stolen from University of British Columbia libraries over a three-year period have been recovered, RCMP said Wednesday. Brian Charles Dobson was charged with theft and possession of stolen goods in excess of $200. Trial date will be set Sept. 17.

Discovery Relieves Relative

VANCOUVER (CP) — Joe Thompson, a relative of the Duncan family members killed in a light plane crash 19 years ago near Seattle, said Thursday that he was relieved to finally know where the craft went down and to recover the remains.

Officials at the King County medical examiner's office said Wednesday the remains almost certainly belong to Warren Wall, his wife, Mary, and their young son, Glen — all of whom died in a plane crash May 19, 1957. The wreckage was found by a hiker Aug. 1 near North Bend, Wash., about 30 miles east of Seattle.

Thompson, Mary's brother who now lives in Port Alberni, said he hiked into the crash area several weeks ago.

He said the family had flown the single-engne Piper aircraft to Ellensburg, Wash., to visit relatives and they attempted to return in turbulent weather. After their disappearance, he said he took part in a 30-day search effort by air and on the ground that found nothing.

Thompson said relatives haven't decided whether to hold a funeral for the family but the remains will be sent to a Port Alberni funeral home later this month.

Towboat Success Doubted

VANCOUVER (CP) — Veteran crew members of Northland Shipping Ltd. said Thursday they are not impressed with a suggestion by Rivtow Straits Ltd. that the towboat company will take over freight service to British Columbia north coast communities.

Captain Louis Fleming, president of Northland, said the decision to end cargo and passenger service and lay off 150 employees by Oct. 31 is based on the federal government's refusal to renew a $3.1-million subsidy for the money-losing operation of the company's three ships.

Vancouver-based Rivtow has said it is prepared to take over the bulk of freight service, using tugs and barges.

"You got any idea what the winter weather can be like up there in Hecate Strait?" asked Bill Bland, second engineer on the Island Prince, in an interview Thursday. Hecate Strait is between Vancouver Island and the Queen Charlotte Islands.

"It's tough enough for a ship," said Bland, who has sailed for Northland for 20 years. "A tug and a barge couldn't make it.

"It's (using tugs) been tried, and people have died that way," said Bland. "Any outfit that tries it again will wind up on the bottom of the strait, one way or another."

"Even if a barge system could handle the winter weather, there are some areas that would be left out because of missing ramp facilities," Chief Officer Willy Prucklmeier said, "and barges can't carry passengers."

"Sure, a tug-and-barge outfit might start off without demanding a subsidy, but after losing a vessel or two in winter and calculating on the storm damage to cargo, it would be crying for a subsidy soon enough," he said.

FIREMEN 'SAVE' HIGH WIRE ACT

VANCOUVER (CP) — The fire department had to rescue a logger at the Pacific National Exhibition timber show Thursday night.

Art Williams of Ladysmith, who bills himself as Canada's only lady logger and dresses in women's clothing, as part of his comedy routine, was doing his comedy high-wire act between two 100-foot poles when he slipped, fell and became entangled in the rigging.

Protest 'Intelligent'

VANCOUVER (CP) — A Canadian economist said Thursday that the Canadian Labor Congress plan to stop work for a day in October to protest federal wage and price controls in "intelligent behavior" and understandable. Harry Johnson said in an interview that the federal government is to blame for the "mess" in which Canada finds itself.

Canadian controls are "absolute nonsense," said Johnson, who teaches at the University of Chicago for nine months, and the rest of the year at the University of Geneva in Switzerland. "It took us 25 years to get world inflation and there is no way we can get rid of it in a day or two," he said.

B.C. Economic Council Urged

The B.C. Chamber of Commerce Thursday urged the provincial government to establish an economic council to advise the government on economic policies.

In its annual brief to the cabinet, the chamber proposed the council, composed of all segments to the economy, to "help get our economy back on the track."

The council, which would directly advise the government, would be backed up by a government-funded economic research institue, the chamber suggested.

The brief was presented to cabinet in a more than one hour meeting by 25 chamber representatives headed by president Winston Stothert.

The brief says governments have initiated "profound structural changes in our economic system to the point that we no longer have a free market."

"As a result of these policies we have become noncompetitive internationally," the brief says and suggests that the economic council would help the government respond to the situation.

The brief covers a wide variety of recommendations to government, but does not deal with the ferry fare increases which chambers of commerce on Vancouver Island have strongly opposed.

Recommendations in the brief include:

—Restraint by government, crown corporations and serve and supply industries to avoid "excessive wage rate increases";

—Seminars and a task force study to develop an alternative to the "wasteful adversary system" of labor-management negotiations;

—An update of a report written in 1957 by now-Transport Minister Jack Davis on mining and mineral processing in Canada, which would "return investor confidence and replace public misinformation with facts;"

—A concentrated program to establish northern development policies;

—Preparation of a policy aimed at settlement of Indian land claims issues "because without resolution of the claims and rights of this minority group of B.C. citizens, the opportunities for development (of the north) may be unduly delayed or deferred indefinitely";

—Proclamation of an amendment to the logging tax act which would reduce the tax rate to 10 per cent;

—A revised welfare payment system ranging from a guaranteed annual income for recipients who cannot be retained or rehabilitated to the denial of welfare payments to anyone directly involved in a labor dispute.

Quebec Denies Sending Welfare Folk to B.C.

MONTREAL (CP) — Quebec government spokesmen Thursday denied a claim by British Columbia's human resources minister that Quebec Welfare workers have encouraged welfare recipients to move to B.C. where social assistance rates are higher.

The claim was made in Kamloops, Wednesday by Bill Vander Zalm, who said he believed that until recently it was common practice to post charts showing the difference in assistance rates between the two provinces in Quebec welfare offices.

But Rene Simard, spokesmen for the Quebec minister of state for social affairs, denied such charts were ever posted.

"Why should we encourage anybody to go to the expense of moving across the country to collect welfare in B.C.?"

The basic rate for single welfare recipients in B.C. is $160 a month, while a single Quebecer under 30 and fit to work is entitled to $85 monthly.

The B.C. minister said a study by his department showed between 14,000 and 15,000 people arrive in B.C. annually from other parts of Canada and immediately put themselves on welfare.

BOTULISM CITED IN CRIB DEATHS

SACRAMENTO (Reuter) — California state health officials said Thursday they believe they have discovered a possible reason for infant crib deaths by identifying a previously unsuspected form of botulism.

"It's a tremendous discovery," said Jerome Lackner, director of the California health department, in announcing research findings at a news conference.

He said a botulism strain was discovered in the feces of four infants ranging in age from six to 13 weeks.

A health department official said the botulism spores did not enter the body in the form of food poisoning, as with adults, but through sucking dirty spoons or toys.

Because food poisoning was not discovered, botulism had never been given as a cause of sudden infant deaths in California.

The health official said that after infants picked up the botulism strain, the poison was produced within the babies' intestinal tracts.

Lackner said California doctors had succeeded in saving the lives of four infants sufferng from the disease.

"There is no question that we have discovered a disease," Lackner explained. "We only raise the question whether the infant botulism might explain the sudden infant death syndrome crib deaths.

U.S. Investment Growing

WASHINGTON (CP) — U.S. investment in Canada is still climbing, despite the effects of recession and Canadian economic policies, and now stands at more than $31 billion.

At the same time, Canadian investment in the U.S., moving at a much slower rate, has reached $5.1 billion.

The figures, provided by the U.S. commerce department, show that the rate of increase, in both countries, had fallen in 1975. U.S. investment in Canada increased about nine per cent, which is less than the increase of U.S. investments world-wide. But Canadian investment in the U.S. increased only four per cent, and that was entirely as a result of earnings which U.S. companies reinvested in their Canadian holdings.

U.S. investment in Canada accounts for almost one-quarter of the total $133 billion Americans have invested abroad. It is more than all foreign countries combined have invested in the U.S.

Canadians account for less than one-fifth of the total foreign investment in the U.S., which is $26.7 billion.

Spider-Man Can't Sell Vitamins

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In a landmark decision that will affect the way vitamins and other drug products may be advertised for children, the Federal Trade Commission Thursday clamped severe restrictions on advertising for "Spider-man" vitamins.

Saying the use of such "hero figures" can trade on children's trust and open the door to overdoses, the agency announced that Hudson Pharmaceutical Corp. has signed a consent order after already dropping the ads voluntarily.

The settlement bans the use of children's vitamin ads on television or in print if the "dominant appeal" is to children or if children make up half the audience of TV programs carrying the ads.

In addition, the company may not air children's vitamin ads on television before 9:05 p.m. local time if Spider-man or another hero figure is used; may not depict a hero figure larger than half the size of the ad itself; may not advertise children's vitamins at all in comic books, and may not mail such ads directly to children.

"Children are unqualified by age or experience to decide for themselves whether or not they should use multiple vitamin supplements in general or an advertised brand in particular," the commission said.

EASIER RABIES SHOTS

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Scientists at the Wistar institute say they have developed a new vaccine billed as "the first major breakthrough" in fighting rabies since Louis Pasteur developed his method in 1885.

Dr. Hilary Koprowski, director of the institute, said Thursday the vaccine requires four to six injections, compared with the Pasteur method requiring 14 to 21 injections.

The new shots will also he given in the arm, not the abdomen as at present.

The vaccine could be marketed and available for use by 1977, Koprowski said.

Koprowski said the new vaccine was tested in Iran, where rabid animals are more common. The vaccine was administered to 45 persons who had been bitten by rabid dogs and wolves and all survived, he said.

Fertilizer, Pesticide Danger

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The farmer's practice of plowing fertilizers and pesticides into the ground at the same time could result in a cancer-producing chemical reaction, according to a government chemist.

The chemist said "notorious nitrosamines, some of which are cancer-causing" could result from chemical interactions between fertilizers and certain widely used pesticides.

Dr. Philip Kearney, chief of the U.S. department of agriculture's pesticide degradation laboratory, reported on the potential new cancer hazard Thursday at the end of the annual meeting of the American Chemical Society. Significance of the discovery was still unclear and further studies were needed, he said.

'Ugly Canadians' Flock Across the Border

GLACIER, Wash. (AP) — The once sleepy Nooksack Valley threatens to become a battleground between local residents and thousands of Canadian recreationists trying to escape the crowded Vancouver area.

More than 5,000 condominiums, home sites, and camping spots have sprouted since 1967 in the Mt. Baker area, with 2,000 more planned.

The land boom has aroused "Ugly Canadian" sentiments that ironically mirror Canadian fears about dominance by the United States.

Mt. Baker area residents Gerald and Neila Stewart have posted a "For Sale" sign outside their 80-year-old home, saying the property taxes and careless intruders are driving them away.

"We wanted to be here for the rest of our lives, but we've had it," Mrs. Stewart said. "People dump garbage on the lawn, park in our front yard and trample the hay."

"We pay five times the property tax that we did eight years ago," her husband added. "I took it to the county assessor and asked why. He told me: "It's because all the Canadians are coming in.' "

The price of recreational land in Whatcom County has tripled since 1971, but remains about half what it is across the border.

The influx of Canadians has been caused by Canada's continued double-digit inflation and the British Columbia government's freeze on farmland development.

Then, too, Vancouver is bursting at the seams, surrounded by mountains and water which allow expansion only to the south.

Land value has increased, and with it Wahtcom County property taxes. One man's property at Glacier, valued at $22,900 in May of 1975, has been reassessed to $41,000.

About 10,000 county residents, many of them farmers, recently signed a petition for property tax relief.

"But folks here are doubly old-fashioned," said one Bellingham college student who grew up in the valley. "They don't want development but they adamantly oppose land use controls."

U.S. GAS PRICE CRITICIZED

BELLINGHAM, Wash. (AP) — Washington Sens. Henry Jackson and Warren Magnuson are keeping up the pressure to have Secretary of State Henry Kissinger reverse a State Department action setting a single price for natural gas imported from Canada.

The two Democrats argued in a letter to Kissinger released today that the action "discriminates against Northwest customers and inflicts serious damage to the economy of our region.

The senators noted that the policy is in direct opposition to that of the Canadian government, which initially expressed preference for a multi-level export price policy.

"It appears to us that price differences in the sales of commercial goods or services between nations are commonplace and that the sudden State Department position of insisting on a single export price is highly unusual and unsupportable," they said.

Meanwhile, in Washington, the Federal Power Commission agreed on Thursday to reconsider its decision to raise the price ceilings on natural gas.

The FCC announced its unanimous decision to grant a "rehearing for further reconsideration" in response to petitions from 19 parties, including some who think the $1.5-billion annual increase is too large and others who say it is too small.

Kepone Hush Up Not Proven

WASHINGTON (WP) — Charges against two Allied Chemical Corp. employees concerning Kepone pollution of the James River were dismissed Thursday by U.S. District Judge Robert R. Merhige, who said prosecutors had proved Allied polluted the river but not that the two were involved in a conspiracy to cover it up.

"I am simply not satisfied beyond a reasonable shadow of a doubt" that Frank Piguet and Gerald Williams were part of the conspiracy, the judge announced to a stilled Alexandria, Va., courtroom. "It is as simple as that."

Piquet, manager of Allied's sprawling Hopewell, Va., works, and Williams, a technical superintendent there, were accused of conspiring to cover up the production of Kepone at Hopewell and the discharge of the highly toxic banana and potato pesticide into the James.

But the judge, rejecting a final government plea that he was hearing a "pollution case," indicated he will deal severely with Allied for the pollution. Allied and others face trial in Richmond, Va., Sept. 27 on additional pollution and conspiracy charges that grew out of operation of Life Science Products Co., a small firm that began making Kepone for Allied in a converted Hopewell gasoline station in 1974.

ReaLemon Under Fire

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Federal Trade Commission judge ruled today that Borden, Inc., illegally has maintained a monopoly in processed lemon juice and ordered the firm to make its ReaLemon brand name available for licensing to competitors.

Daniel Hanscom found that "Borden engaged in a number of acts and practices with the purpose of maintaining its monopoly position, and which had the effect of hindering, restraining or preventing competition in the processed lemon juice market."

In Columbus, Ohio, a spokesman for Borden said the ruling would be appealled to the full commission. He said Hanscom's order fails "to understand the operation of the market place or the functions of trademarks."

Kelley Pays For 'Gift' Job

WASHINGTON (WP) — FBI Director Clarency Kelley — his job in jeopardy because he accepted gifts and home-decorating services from subordinates — paid the bureau $335 Thursday for a pair of government-made window valances.

The $335, which Kelley paid by cheque, represented the cost of constructing the plywood frames to correct errors in the original measurements and four trips to Kelley's Bethesda Md., apartment for their installation shortly after he took office in July 1973.

This disclosure came as Kelley met with Attorney-General Edward Levi for more than an hour Thursday. However, they refused to say whether Levi will recommend that Presidnet Ford retain Kelley as FBI chief.

Ford asked Levi on Wednesday for a report about allegations that Kelley had acted improperly. The Washington Post reported the same day that one justice department official had recommended that Kelley be fired and publicly reprimanded.

Sources said Levi, in consultation with Deputy Attorney-General Harold Tyler, was still pondering what recommendation, if any, he will send to Ford.

FORGERY RING AMID CADETS?

AIR FORCE ACADEMY, Colo. (AP) — The U.S. Air Force has ordered a full-scale investigation into a lawyer's charges that cadets have been operating a forgery and theft ring at the Air Force Academy since 1972.

A spokesman for the academy acknowledged Thursday that the Air Force Office of Special Investigations was conducting a probe.

Maj. Monte Blews, the academy's chief public relations officer, said Thursday that one cadet forger was court-martialed and dismissed, and that another accused cadet resigned in the summer of 1975.

Charter Flight 'Affinity' Dropped

WASHINGTON (AP) — New government rules will allow Americans to take low-cost charter flights to any part of the world without having to join a group or buy ground accommodations such as hotels.

The new charters, similar to those already popular in Europe, require a traveler to buy a round-trip ticket in advance. But the "affinity group" requirement is being eliminated and travelers won't have to stay for minimum periods, except in nine European countries where visitors will be required to stay at least seven days.

Tickets on charter flights traditionally have cost about half the cost of a coach seat on a scheduled flight.

The new rules issued Thursday by the Civil Aeronautics Board cover both domestic and overseas flights and will go into effect on Oct. 7.

The new rules face possible legal challenges from scheduled airlines that generally have opposed more liberal charter rules. On the other hand, a charter organization has already said it will seek a court order to strike down remaining charter restrictions.

Because the new charters, known as Advance Booking Charters, do not require passengers to belong to any organized group, the CAB ruling might lessen the lure that some travelers found in "affinity groups."

The CAB had required everyone on the plane to share an interest other than traveling.

This encouraged the growth of social and occupational organizations that also traveled. In fact, some of these groups had no purpose other than to qualify as "affinity groups" under CAB rules.

Under the new rules, there is no minimum fare and charter operators will be allowed to set the fare on their own.

Countries where the European rules will apply are Belgium, West Germany, Finland, France, Ireland, Italy, Netherlands, Switzerland and the United Kingdom.

To qualify for the charters, passengers will be required to buy their tickets at least 30 days in advance for domestic flights and at least 45 days in advance for European flights. Tickets will be purchased from independent charter brokers who will organize the flights.

CONTROVERSIAL contact is inserted by Dr. Stuart Grant, a Los Angeles optometrist who practises a technique called orthokeratology, a relatively new type of treatment with contact lenses that proposes to improve bad eyesight permanently. The technique involves fitting the eye with a succession of closely fitted contacts, each of which presses the cornea a bit more toward proper curvature. But not all doctors are convinced of its safety or if it works.

Tax Charges Laid Against Oil Firm

TULSA, Okla. (AP). — The Phillips Petroleum Co., its board chairman and two former board chairmen have been charged with federal tax violations in an indictment alleging a global conspiracy that used misleading entries, code names and international couriers.

The indictment accuses the defendants of raising about $3 million in secret transactions and concealing the money in Swiss bank deposits and as cash at company headqaurters in Bartelsville, Okla.

The government charged that the money was not reported as income on tax returns filed for 1963 through 1971.

Individuals named in the charges were William Martin, Phillips board chairman; W. W. Keeler, the firm's chief executive from 1967 to 1972; and Stanley Learned, chief executive from 1964 to 1967.

Each was charged with conspiracy to defraud the government in reporting and paying corporate income taxes.

In a statement from his office, Martin said the charges were unfounded.

The conspiracy, the government charged, was carried out in Washington, Geneva, London and Panama City as well as Bartlesville.

Vaccine Overtime Urged

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. government is suggesting that drug manufacturers put workers on overtime to speed up the packaging of vaccine for the nationwide swine flu immunization program, which is running behind schedule.

President Ford summoned officials of the department of health, education and welfare (HEW) to the White House Thursday to see what could be done about getting the program on track.

"It damn well better run right," press secretary Ron Nessen quoted the president as saying.

The program is supposed to reach 143 million Americans and HEW reported there is enough vaccine on hand in bulk to make up more than 140 million doses. The critical shortage is in individual doses.

After meeting with the president, HEW secretary David Mathews told reporters that Dr. Theodore Coooper, an assistant HEW secretary and chief of the vaccine program, has contacted all the vaccine manufacturers concerning a lag in vaccine production.

PM'S 'FLIP' HURTS PARTY

OTTAWA (CP) — A steady decline in Liberal popularity, illustrated by recent opinion polls, can be traced to Prime Minister Trudeau's decision to implement wage and price controls after criticizing them in the 1974 election, Conservative MP Claude Wagner (St. Hyacinthe) said Thursday.

He told reporters that the decline in popularity is not the result of government stands on bilingualism, agriculture or economics as suggested Wednesday by Health Minister Marc Lalonde.

Wagner said the prime minister created a confidence crisis last October when he "flip-flopped" on an election promise and implemented controls. The Conservative party fought for controls during that election, and lost.

"Had Mr. Trudeau been inspired by a more sense of decency and of political responsibility, he would have asked the Canadian electorate for a precise endorsement of his about-face."

But the prime minister "had neither that courage nor that wisdom."

Wagner said his party now is perceived as an alternative to the government and that it must develop policies that are "Not mere replicas of those followed by the Liberals."

The Carter Boys Have Gone to Pot

PLAINS, Ga. (AP) — Rosalynn Carter says her three sons have told her they have tried marijuana, but she says their behaviour does not worry her because they are honest about it.

"The only time I worry about my children like smoking marijuana, is if I thought they were slipping around and doing it and not letting me know about it," the wife of Democratic presidential candidate Jimmy Carter said in an interview in Plains.

"That's the kind of relationship I hope I never have with my children, and I don't feel I've ever had that. They've smoked marijuana — they told me they did."

Mrs. Carter's assistant press secretary said the candidate's wife "feels marijuana should be decriminalized but not legalized."

Carter said in a February, 1976, questionnaire printed in the New Hampshire Times, "I favor a modified form of marijuana decriminalization along the lines of the Oregon law which has civil penalties for small amounts of possession. I feel that this legislation should be left up to the individual states themselves."

The three Carter sons are Jack, 29; Chip, 26; and Jeff, 24. All are married. The Carter's daughter, Amy, is 8.

Mrs. Carter said she hopes that "I have as close a relationship with Amy as I have with the boys."

In 1974, Betty Ford, wife of the president who is Carter's chief opponent in the November election, also said her children probably had tried marijuana.

"Children try everything, don't they? But they definitely don't like it and it isn't used, I believe," Mrs. Ford said.

Mrs. Carter plans to be at her husband's side Monday when he officially kicks off his campaign, but after that she'll be on her own, travelling alone in his behalf.

"Of course I miss him, and it would be better if I could be with him," she said Wednesday.

"But I feel there's so much I can do if I have my own schedule. When I'm with Jimmy, I just tag along."

POST OFFICE STOPS OLYMPIC STAMP SALE

OTTAWA (CP) — The post office today stopped selling series of special metal stamps issued to help raise money for the recent Olympic games.

A spokesman said the post office has yet to determine how much money was raised through the sale of the metal stamps or how many are left over. Figures would be released once leftover metal stamps were collected.

Surplus metal stamps will be put on display, or used in promotional giveaways, the spokesman said.

Computer Movie Takes You Inside the Brain

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — It won't play at your local movie theatre, but a new film practically takes the viewer on a journey into the human brain.

The film, resulting from the blending of photography and computer techniques, has been hailed by its developers as one of the most innovative research procedures developed for neuroscience.

For years, Dr. Robert Livingston, neuroscientist at the University of California, San Diego, has been able to convert to movie film a step-by-step analysis of micro-slices of the human brain.

But only recently has he teamed with Kent Wilson of the UCSD chemistry department to reduce the anatomy of a brain to three-dimensional computer models, which provide a new precision for display, measurement and comparison of human brain structure.

In a process known as cinemorphology, the human brain is embedded in solid plastic, then placed on a giant microtome, which slices the brain at precise intervals, into pieces 25 microns (a micron is one-millionth of a metre).

As each piece is sliced — about 1,000 of them — the remaining brain is precisely photographed. The series of photos are then put on movie film, and the result is a smooth flowing examination of the brain.

Through electronic means, the individual photos have been converted to computer storage, to be retrieved as three-dimensional computer "models." When projected they look much like intricate line drawings. Each of the 24 parts of the brain, which have been converted, is in a different color.

Researchers can study any part of the brain, from any angle, and then can "fit" it together with other parts to see their relationship.

While the new system is a boon to students — because it will enable them to better understand the sizes, shapes, and interrelationships of various parts of the brain — Livingston sees even greaterr potential in research.

He says the motion picture is merely a "sideshow to quantative neurology. We wanted to have some means to get the absolutely accurate and precise organization and relationships."

Once a "normal" brain is so graphically displayed it can be used as a base against which to compare "abnormal" brains to determine how they differ. Livingston admitted that he's now looking for a "pedigree brain" — that of someone of great intellectual achievement — to make comparisons.

GEOFF'S BREW A REAL BLAST

ALTON, England — An army bomb disposal squad dealt with a threat to the neighborhood of Alton Thursday — Geoffrey Clark's homemade ginger beer.

Clark, 29, was opening the first bottle of his new brew when it exploded.

"The metal top flew off and flattened itself against the garage wall 20 feet away," Clark said. "My wife thought a gun had gone off."

Clark then tried to break the remaining bottles by throwing a brick at them but another explosion scattered glass over a 40-foot area.

"I went deaf in one ear," Clark said.

"Neighbors 100 yards away heard the bang."

Police arrived and called in the army bomb unit from Aldershot barracks to deal with the rest of the potent brew.

But Were They Stanfield's?

VERNER, Ont. — J. J. Blais showed himself Thursday to be an undercover Liberal.

The Liberal member of Parliament for Nipissing was asked by Joe Kingley, a member of the Ontario Progressive Conservative party, why he wore nothing red — the Liberal color — during the official opening of a senior citizens' centre in this community 35 miles west of North Bay.

The MP went to the podium, reached into his pants and pulled out a corner of his red underwear, proving to all that appearances can be deceiving.

Swan Songh for Mr. Singh

OTTAWA — An international group of health teachers has created a mythical guru-like figure called Mohan Singh and used him for the last two years to poke fun at their profession.

In addition to being listed as a member of the North American organizing committee of an international health education conference here, Singh has been quoted in scholarly health education journals around the world.

A sample of Singh's quotations include:

—"If the tiger is in the garden need the cobra fear the mongoose?"

Says Howard Ogden of the U.S. Public Health Service:

Under the jobs wanted section was Singh's notice that he needed a job, having lost his as a result of his association with the conference.

NO ONE CARED WHEN SHE SAT BEFORE THE LOOM TO WEAVE PERSIAN RUGS
Primitive people didn't care for the near descendant of our first mother, who was sitting in her rude cave, struggling to evolve the spindle upon which to spin the yarn, and the loom on which to stretch the threads for wrap and weft. Thus her name was lost in that dim and distant past before history began because they didn't know these carpets would become the masterpieces of the future.
Today, many persons have little information about the Persian Carpet and its traditional art. The reason is obvious: The world's precious masterpieces repose in meseums throughout Europe and America and are unknown by all but a few who seek them out.
World famous H.A.M. of Iran have carefully selected some of the world's rare and precious Bankers Collection for this special sale at

No-Show by Kosygin Spurs Stroke Rumor

MOSCOW — Alexei Kosygin, failed to appear Thursday at the first post-vacation appearance of the ruling politburo. His absence from airport departure ceremonies and the announcement that a new first deputy had been named to assist him added weight to the uncomfirmed reports that he had suffered a stroke while swimming in the Moscow River and was saved from drowning by his bodyguards.

CHICAGO — Richard Speck, sentenced to 400 to 1,200 years in prison for killing eight Chicago nurses in 1966, will ask a parole board Sept. 15 for freedom. Thousands of persons across the country have protested. Tom Munro, assistant to the chairman of the Illinois Parole and Pardon Board, said Thursday the hearing at Stateville Penitentiary where Speck is imprisoned should take about an hour — about four times as long as the usual parole hearing.

CARSON CITY, Nev. — Glen Campbell was married Thursday to Sarah Davis, former wife of entertainer Mac Davis. It was the third marriage for Campbell, 40, divorced earlier this year. It was the second for Mrs. Davis, 24, also divorced this year.

ROME — Prime Minister Trudeau met President Giovanni Leone today and the two leaders reviewed relations between Canada and Italy, an official communique said. The meeting at the Quirinale presidential palace was also attended by Foreign Minister Arnaldo Forlani and other Italian officials.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. — A 68-year-old former FBI file clerk and code-breaker has written a book describing the love she shared with Edgar J. Hoover. Titled FBI Woman, the book tells of the mostly platonic relationship between the late FBI director, who never married, and Mrs. Blonde Fowler, a divorcee who worked at the FBI's Washington headquarters from 1943 to 1952. Fowler said she decided to tell her story because "I kept hearing all this dirt about Hoover, especially about homosexuality." According to Fowler's account, Hoover and she were engaged to be married at one time, but she returned his ring following an argument in his office. They never married, she said, because of an ailment she suffered stemming from operations she underwent shortly after the birth of her daughter. Her only marriage ended in divorce in 1935.

PENSACOLA, Fla. — A businessman who is alleged to have paid $2,500 to a policeman in an unsuccessful plot to kill his former wife is suing the city to get back the money. His ex-wife has joined him in the suit. The man contends the city agreed to return the money in exchange for his pleading no contest to charges of conspiracy to commit murder and colicitation to commit a felony. City lawyer Don Caton said Thursday that municipal lawyers and counsel for businessman James Naes and his former wife, Geraldine, are negotiating a settlement for the return of the money. Naes was behind on alimony and child-support payments and Caton said any final settlement would stipulate that the money go to Mrs. Naes. "If he's behind in his alimony, we certainly don't want him to get credit for this money."

COLUMBUS — Funeral services were held Thursday for Mrs. Dollie McCoy Allen, the oldest descendant of Randolph McCoy who with William Hatfield started one of history's greatest mountain feuds. Mrs. Allen, who celebrated her 102nd birthday last Feb. 6, died this week in a local hospital after being hospitalized three weeks ago. "Her heart just wore out and everything worked against everything else," said her daughter, Mrs. Azelle White.

SAFEWAY CUSTOMERS ARE ASKING WHY SAFEWAY HAS CLOSED ITS B.C. OPERATIONS AND PUT 5200 EMPLOYEES OUT OF WORK.

Prior to 1974 industrial relations at Canada Safeway's Distribution Centre were chaotic. In an effort to improve that situation the company and their employees, represented by the Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Union, Local 580, signed an agreement on May 15, 1974, which gave the company the right to lockout and the union the right to strike over non-economic issues during the term of the collective agreement. Both sides agreed that the status of the agreement would not be challenged in the courts or before the Labour Relations Board.

Safeway admits that the agreement was a success. Industrial relations improved — and there were no strikes or lockouts as a result of the agreement! Labour Relations Board Vice-Chairman John Baigent recognized this fact in a ruling on August 24, 1976, in which he stated:

"It also appears that the formula succeeded over the past two years . . . to the extent of allowing grievances to be resolved without any work stoppages."

But Canada Safeway has gone against its word. They have challenged a successful agreement and apparently want to return to the chaos of the past.

Why? Is it because Anti-Inflation Board rollbacks of retail employees' wages have given Safeway unexpected profits, and that ratner than return those profits to its customers, the company has engaged in a lockout?

Whatever the reason, Safeway employees are ready and willing to return to the bargaining table. All they ask is that existing conditions not be eliminated and that the company bargain in good faith. You be the judge. Is that asking too much?

AA—The Only Thing That Works

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

The head of the World-Wide Alcoholics Anonymous isn't an alcoholic, never has been, and even takes a drink every now and then.

But that doesn't make Dr. Jack Norris any less an authority on the subject of alcoholism.

He's spent the past 40 years absorbed with the problem, both as associate medical director at Eastman Kodak's 27,000-employee plant at Rochester, New York, and now as chairman of the AA's general service board — the 15-member board of trustees that sets broad policy lines for the more than one million members in 90 countries in the western world.

Gentle, soft-spoken, and despite his snow-white hair looking 10 years younger than his age of 73, Norris was in Victoria Thursday, the penultimate stop in a cross-country public information tour. Today he travels to Vancouver and then heads back to his home in New Hampshire.

The message he is carrying should inspire hope. In an interview Thursday prior to a dinner-meeting of AA groups at University of Victoria, Norris said he believes inroads are being made in helping the millions of people suffering fron alcoholism. How? By the mere fact more and more people are talking about the problem, "bringing it out from under the carpet and showing it the light of day."

That, in itself, is only a beginning, he says. Much work needs yet to be done. In research. In public education. In convincing doctors and politicians that alcoholism is a sickness and not just a moral weakness.

But he's encouraged. "I guess I'm a born optimist.

"As I look back on the situation 30 years ago it was a different ballgame then. Very few alcoholics would be admitted to hospitals. Now, for hospitals to receive federal funds, they have to admit alcoholics as acute patients. It's a major step in my opinion."

NORRIS

Of course he's only referring to the situation in the U.S. B.C. hospitals won't accept alcoholics for treatment of alcoholism. It's government policy. When told, Norris gives a discreet shudder but refuses to comment.

He says he feels "uncomfortable" about liquor advertising and the importance of liquor sales as a source of taxation, but is pragmatic enough to realize little can be done to change things.

He regards prohibition as a failure.

Nothing about the problem of alcoholism is simple, says Norris. The cause isn't known. There's no cure. It remains the most dangerous of all drugs, the most addictive and the most physically damaging.

He believes a reformed alcoholic cannot and should not be tempted back to controlled social drinking, as suggested by some experts in the field.

He agrees some alcoholics may be able to handle it, but "we don't know who they are."

It's safest, he concludes, to simply abstain . . . totally.

And that's where AA comes into the picture.

No organization has been more successful in helping people with drinking problems. Half of its members never touch alcohol again he says, and another quarter who slip, come back.

Norris attributes the siccess to the fact it is nearly impossible for a person to stop drinking on his own. Everyone in AA is in the same boat, lending support, fighting to stay sober.

But it's more than that.

"If a person does it our way, it's fun," he assures, his blue eyes flashing behind silver-framed glasses. "They're the happiest bunch of guys you ever saw."

LINE OF DEFENCE

District 61 school board chairman Bill Ross has agreed with MLA Scott Wallace (PC-Oak Bay) that counselling within the schools is the first line of defence against delinquency.

"But if the provincial government wishes us to tackle the problem, they should mandate us to do so and provide necessary finances," Ross said.

In a press release Thursday, Wallace criticized a budgetary move by Greater Victoria school district that will cut the number of special counsellors from 10 to five.

"The decision is particularly disappointing at a time when juvenile delinquency is an issue very much in the minds of the public," Wallace said.

Wallace said school counselling was "essentially preventive" — the best assistance for the student and far less costly than dealing with the consequences of delinquent behavior.

A school board hiring freeze on teachers necessitated the move to put five counsellors back in the classroom, Ross said.

The 10 counsellors had been based in the school board offices and went into schools for counselling services where needed.

"The basic classroom needs have to be filled first," Ross said. Hence the move to re-assign five counsellors as teachers.

Besides the counselling staff, shifts were also being made in itinerant music and physical education staff to cope with the over-all teaching problem, Ross said.

Police Probe Begins Into Woman's Death

A senior member of the B.C. Police Commission has started an investigation into circumstances surrounding the July 3 death of a 21-year-old pregnant Indian woman, Coreen Thomas of Vanderhoof.

Inspector Bob Fullerton will also report on relations between native Indians and the local community in Vanderhoof, where the woman was struck by a car, John Hogarth, chairman of the police commission, said Thursday.

The move follows allegations by native groups that whites in the area try to run down Indians who are walking on the road.

"We have to satisfy ourselves that the police investigation was done properly," Hogarth said.

"It is important to see this as a community-wide problem, not just a police problem," said Hogarth.

Police may set up a public meeting to discuss problems between Indians and townspeople in Vanderhoof, he added. "The solution lies in the community as a whole."

The head of the police commission denied suggestions that relations between native Indians and police are deteriorating.

He said the suggestions put forward at a meeting Thursday by Bishop Remi de Roo chairman of the B.C. Human Rights Commission, had been viewed by the police commission as a slap in the face.

"We're not satisfied with where we are now, but the position is better than it was three or four years ago," Hogarth said. "It's not getting worse."

Members of the two commissions met Thursday following complaints to the Human Rights Commission by native Indian groups about police treatment in the province.

Discussions proved the Human Rights Commission was unaware of the many police schemes already attempting to reduce tension, Hogarth said.

The commission will hold another joint meeting in mid-October following an inquest into Miss Thomas' death.

"We hope some potential solutions to the problems in Vanderhoof will come out of Insp. Fullerton's report," said Hogarth.

PROBE ORDERED

PORT ALBERNI — An inquest has been ordered into the deaths Tuesday of two Victoria men killed when their pickup truck plunged 120 feet into a gully off a logging road at Green Cove near Kildonan, west of here.

Killed were Len Zapshala, 51, of 311-1537 Belcher, and Glen Evans, 24, of 4457 Narvaez Crescent.

Employees of Carson Bulldozing, the men were driving to a work site when they met a logging truck heading in the opposite direction.

Port Alberni RCMP said the pickup went over the side of the road as it pulled over to let the logging truck pass.

Evans was killed instantly. Zapshala died later in the day at Port Alberni's West Coast General Hospital.

FALL FAIR FUN AT SAANICH

Saanich Fall Fair manager Henry Robinson promises a variety of events that will keep visitors entertained for all three days of the 108th annual fair.

The fair runs Saturday, Sunday and Monday. Gates open at 8 a.m. each day at the Saanichton Fairgrounds, on East Saanich Road just north of Mount Newton Crossroad.

Cost is $1.50 for adults, 75 cents for teens and senior citizens and free to children under 12. Adults may purchase a three-day pass for $3.

Saturday's highlights include highland dancing, beef cattle judging and many of the 4-H events. There will also be folk-dancing in costume Saturday afternoon.

Sunday is the day for farm games — including fancy dressed cows and goats.

Monday's events include the judging of dairy cattle and sheep; more 4-H events and a livestock parade, cow-milking contest, a goat-tying contest and calf races.

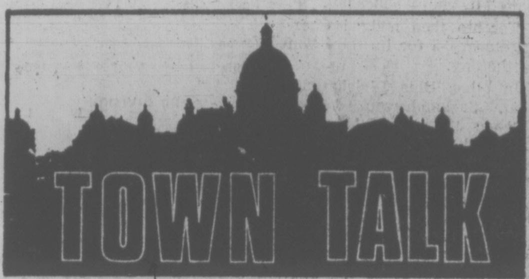
The auction sale of beef and lambs begins at 4:45 p.m. Monday. And at 6:30 p.m. there will be country gospel singing in the bandshell.

A number of events occur throughout the three-day fair. An orchestra will play Saturday night and Monday afternoon.

Every day there will be demonstrations of old-time farm machinery — one of the few places where these old machines can still be seen in action.

Horse shows will be held each day. Square dancing with tractors will also be held each day.

Robinson said all concessions on the fairgrounds are run by local, non-profit organizations.



Under new burial rates for Ross Bay cemetery, approved this week by the city parks committee, why should it cost more to be buried on a Saturday?

~~A puzzled~~ Ald. Bill Tindall wanted to know why it's going to cost an extra $50 for a six-foot-deep burial on a Saturday morning, and an additional $75 for afternoon interment. That's on top of the basic charge, which has gone up from $105 to $121.

The answer is labor costs, explained parks superintendent Al Smith: Saturday mornings the staff are on time-and-a-half, afternoons on double time.

So it all depends on what you urn . . .

Dr. Eileen Levis, a graduate of Mount Douglas High School, is the only doctor in Warner, New Hampshire, where the population climbs to about 1,200 in the summer months. Her brother William is a doctor in Victoria.

The female Dr. Levis thinks young doctors miss a lot of medicine if they don't experience something like a country practice before specializing. It teaches them to listen to patients.

"You know, some of these specialists are truly great mechanics," she says in the Globe article. "But they don't listen. And that's as much of the job as medicine itself."

The booth is an innovative idea of local Liberals. Go to the fair and you'll come upon a booth with cartoon drawings of Prime Minister Trudeau, provincial Liberal leader Gordon Gibson and Liberal defectors Pat McGeer and Jack Davis, now members of the Socred cabinet.

There will be large openings for the mouths of this quartet and beanbags to hurl free at the target of your choice. Overhead, a sign will read: "fermez his bouche."

Frances Elford, regional vice-president for the Liberals, says a score will be kept on who proves the most popular target.

At some point in the 24-year history of Jerry Gosley's Smile Show, someone certainly sang one of Second World War's most popular songs, The White Cliffs of Dover. Now it seems the famous white cliffs, mostly privately owned, are in danger of commercial development and Jerry has been invited to help save them from such desecration.

A benefit performance will be held in Los Angeles, Nov. 5, which, with tickets priced at $150 and $100 will hopefully raise $50,000 toward preserving the cliffs for posterity. Hollywood actress Anna Lee, who visited the Smile Show recently, has invited Gosley and impersonator Steve Ivings to join the starry cast of the benefit which includes Mel Torme, Irene Dunne, Julie Andrews, Anthony Newley and others.

Gosley says that the Smile Show Society board is also setting up a nation-wide campaign for contributions to the fund and that each donor will receive a souvenir certificate.

Goodwill Enterprises community relations man Alec Reid believes in service, but last week he outdid himself.

It started with a call from an elderly woman who said she had been searching for an obscure children's book entitled Alone in London. Could Reid help?

"There's always a chance," he said not wanting to say the probability of finding a copy was almost nil. The next day he was putting out books for the Goodwill book sale and one of the first he touched was . . . you guessed it, Alone in London.

Instant-on television sets take an undeserved drubbing as an alleged cause of house fires, says Irwin Shea, an electronics technician for 30 years.

"There is absolutely no danger in them," Shea said. "They are no more dangerous than your transistor radio."

Perhaps 10 years ago, when vacuum tubes were used, there was some hazard due to overheating as the electrical current stayed on to keep the set warm between viewings.

But since transistorization, only a minor voltage is required to keep the picture tube slightly warm, about the same as a doorbell, Shea said. And in the past year sets have been made to do away entirely with a maintenance voltage.

The biggest TV danger is turning a set on, then going away and forgetting it, especially if there is a runner or table cloth to impede air circulation, Shea advised.

The climate of Victoria is like the Mediterranean only a bit cooler, says the 1976 Guide to Greater Victoria, which is just off the presses.

As for the summers, they are pleasant and dry, it says.

The guide, published annually by the Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce, also has a revealing article on the founding of the southern portion of the island.

When Captain Cook came to this area in 1777, the Indians were calling Victoria Camosack or Camosun, which by translation means "the place of rushing waters."

The name still fits.

Gloomy Weekend Outlook

Expect rain this long Labor Day weekend.

So what else is new this summer? But at least, says the Victoria weatherman, we'll likely have less rain here than the rest of the Island.

The five-day outlook calls for clouds here and intermittent showers. It will also be cool.

Wash. State Ferry Crews Hit the Bricks

Washington State Ferry runs between Sidney and Anacortes were shut down at midnight Thursday when fleet officers walked off the job without warning.

B.C. Ferries and Black Ball sailings will have to absorb the extra traffic on Labor Day weekend . . . the busiest time of the year. But officials don't expect too much trouble.

"It will probably affect our noon run out of Sidney, but we should be able to absorb the extra cars assembled," a B.C. Ferries spokesman said today.

The Washington State ferry makes two trips a day and has been carrying full loads of 160 cars and several hundred passengers each trip since ferry fare increases on B.C. Ferries.

There are three ferries tied up at Anacortes and one in Friday Harbor after the walkout by members of the Masters', Mates' and Pilots' Union.

"There's no way I can predict how long it will last," Capt. David Boyle, branch agent for the union said today.

He said the walkout was a spontaneous action by the membership, and is fully supported by the union. "The next move is up to the State of Washington," he added.

Boyle said agreement had been reached on a new contract after three months of negotiation.

Management and the union were in "complete agreement on the non-cost items and wages were being negotiated and were not an issue."

"But the agreement was sent to the state attorney-general's department and the contract language was changed to the extent they completely reneged on what we had negotiated," said Boyle.

"The situation seems hopeless."

Ferry system spokesman Lee Kramer said one ferry in the fleet made an emergency run this morning with a 53-year-old woman heart attack victim, but no regular runs are planned.

Two areas — Vashon, west of Seattle, and the San Juan Islands, southwest of Bellingham, are the only areas which would be isolated by a ferry strike. Other destinations can be reached by land.

Free Ferries For Seniors

Senior citizens can ride B.C. Ferries free today and Saturday so they can attend Senior Citizens' Day at the Pacific National Exhibition in Vancouver.

Transport Minister Jack Davis said the special arrangement does not apply to seniors travelling Sunday or Monday and they must show a Pharmacare card and be a B.C. resident.

Seniors must pay for their car or bus fare.

Since the ferry fare increase, senior citizens have been able to travel free Monday through Thursday, except when the Monday is at the end of a long weekend.

They'll Fight For Farmland

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

A spokesman for Royal Oak residents said today if the B.C. Land Commission allows the Capital Region Board to add 70 acres to the industrial park in their area they "will be a bunch of hypocrites."

The board is expected Wednesday to approve a request from Saanich to change its official regional plan so the municipality can expand the industrial park to 120 acres.

The commission must approve removing the land from the agricultural land reserve.

Lawrence Cook, who heads the Royal Oak Concerned Citizens, said his group had received a letter from the land commission saying it wouldn't consider rezoning unless it is proven the land is not productive.

"That land has been graded No. 2, which is highly productive," Cook said, "If they (the commission) go ahead and pass this, they will be a bunch of hypocrites."

Cook said most of the land in the proposed park is owned by speculators waiting to make a financial bonanza.

"When they bought the land it sold for anywhere from 50 cents to $3.50 a foot. If it's zoned for industrial park it will sell for $8.50 to $10 a foot. There's between $20 million and $30 million profits to be made," Cook said.

He added there was no assurance that once given the extra 70 acres, Saanich council would be satisfied.

"It's the same old promises you get from politicians. First they go for 70 acres, then another 50, eventually every spare area on the peninsula will be in it," he said.

The ROCC has circulated more than 1,500 questionnaires to area residents. When all of these are in a public meeting will be called to debate the issue.

"We will put Mayor Ed Lum on the hot seat and let him tell the people personally, instead of through the papers," Cook said.

He said early indications of the survey are that residents "are totally opposed to this light industrial project".

Summer Water Rules Lifted

Water restrictions imposed since June 1 were lifted in Central Saanich Thursday.

But in Sidney the summer restrictions are still in force. A spokesman for the water board said they would probably be lifted in a week or so.

3,000 New Voters

At least 3,000 new voters had been registered in the four core municipalities when registration lists officially closed earlier this week.

But municipal clerks stressed today that their figures are still approximate because there has not been enough time for data processing to weed out transfers, duplications and other deletions.

Ballparks figures for additional voters registered in three of the four municipalities were: Victoria, 1,300; Oak Bay, 545; Esquimalt, 200.

Saanich municipal clerk Gordon Hayward said he was unable to provide even an approximate total.

However, with a population slightly larger than the city's Saanich could be expected to have signed up at least 1,000 new voters.

Mayor Mike Young said today the city has no intention of appealing a B.C. Supreme Court ruling Wednesday, which gave community associations the right to obtain bulk supplies of voters registration forms from City Hall.

"We are only concerned about the casualness of the registration procedure," he said. "It is all so casual and there are so many loose aspects to the act."

Spree Worth Five Months

Mark David Stadnyk, 18, of 2537 Government, had pleaded guilty earlier to dangerous use of a shotgun, possession of a firearm dangerous to the public peace and possession of an imitation weapon for a purpose dangerous to the public peace.

The five-month jail term and 18-month probation covered two earlier charges of possession of marijuana.

Stadnyk had pleaded guilty ot the narcotics charges Aug. 19 and the court was awaiting a pre-sentencing report when the shooting incident occurred.

Several shots were fired Aug. 27, but nobody was injured. In a dramatic 20-minute confrontation, Victoria police sergeant Doug Sleivert removed his own weapon to gain the young man's confidence, and finally persuaded him to lay down the shotgun.

Judge William Ostler praised Sleivert's "cool conduct" in preventing a serious incident, and called him a "very courageous police officer."

Ostler recommended Stadnyk serve the five-months in a forestry camp, and placed a condition on probation that he stay away from drugs and firearms.

The pre-sentence report indicated he had been a heavy user of marijuana since he was 14 using up to one ounce of the drug every two days.

The marijuana charges stemmed from an incident July 13, when Stadnyk was arrested in his apartment — the scene of the later shooting.

$500,000 PUB

The Prairie Inn at 7806 East Saanich Road in Central Saanich, which became B.C.'s first neighborhood pub on Boxing Day 1974, is up for sale at $500,000.

A spokesman said today the inn is being sold because three of the partners plan to start two other businesses.

"With the inn that would be too much," he said.

Two unnamed partners have joined Gavin and Beth Harper, who owned the inn when it became a pub.

Built by Saanich pioneer Henry Simpson in 1893, the inn is the second to be built on the site, Simpson having built a small building there in 1959.

Simpson purchased the 300-acre site for less than 84 pounds sterling.

Impresario Business Sold

Theatrical impresario John Minshall has sold has Victoria company John Minshall Ltd. to Allen Houghton, it was announced Thursday.

Minshall said he sold his business for personal reasons, but he will continue to operate in the field for several more months.

The company has been responsible for booking major touring entertainment programs into the city.

Houghton has had a close association with the arts, first as administrator of Victoria Art Gallery and for the last two years as director of operations for Bastion Theatre.

He said he plans to work with established cultural organizations in addition to bringing in national and international artists. As a member of the interim committee of the B.C. Touring Arts Presenters, he intends to assist in organizing and promoting touring art attractions through B.C.

Minshall brought a number of notable international attractions to the city, including the Martha Graham Dance Company. But his crowning achievement of three years as the city's first full-time resident impresario was his collaboration with Kaleidoscope Theatre in the musical, Cabaret, which ends its two-month run tonight at the Empress Hotel.

Missing Inmate Mystifies Officials

And, while police mount a search for him, prison officials are wondering why he skipped.

Older than most at 56, his demeanor in prison, at least, belied the fact he had a criminal record stretching back 39 years.

William Head director John Mulroney, in an interview today, referred to him as a "model inmate," always helpful, always cheerful . . . the last man anyone would expect to run away.

So much trust had been given him that since last December he has received 70 day passes — 35 of them to attend an in-service program at Saanich's Glendale Lodge for special problem children.

Al, as the kids called him, developed a strong rapport with his young charges and everyone was pleased with his progress.

As far as Glendale staff were concerned there were few inmates more understanding, patient, or imaginative.

"It's probably hackneyed to say it but I think he was devoted to our residents," says Archie Morrison supervisor of social services.

Babcock arrived Wednesday morning with a group of about 10 inmates. He spent the morning with the children, then went to lunch. At 1:30 p.m. he was expected to return but never showed up.

The William Head bus left at 5:30 p.m. without him. An hour later he was officially reported unlawfully at large. Now a Canada-wide warrant has been issued for his arrest.

Mulroney is unable to explain Babcock's sudden departure.

"Why does anyone leave? It's terribly disappointing. He's let himself down again . . . and the rest of us too. His action may jeopardise the Glendale program, which I consider one of the best we have."

Morrison said Babcock had told him a week ago he was concerned about having to leave the program because there was talk he might be moved to another area — a forest camp on the mainland where he could use skills as a heavy duty mechanic.

"He didn't want to go," said Morrison. "But there was no indication he was depressed."

Morrison noted Babcock had escaped from William Head once before, two years ago. Then it was over marital problems.

Other Teams Will Be Tougher

OTTAWA (CP) — After cruising to an 11-2 win over Finland in the opening game of the Canada Cup hockey tournament Thursday, Team Canada players agreed they'll face tougher opposition in future games.

"I don't think we should let this game influence us about the way the other teams are going to be," said Richard Martin of Buffalo Sabres, who paced Team Canada with three goals and two assists and was selected as the top Canadian player in the game. "They're going to be a lot tougher."

Team Canada started in high gear, missing several early scoring chances before connecting for three goals by the 7:11 mark and cruised the rest of the way to 4-1 and 6-1 period leads.

Coach Scotty Bowman and several of the players said the lopsided score would not affect Team Canada.

"Our fellows are mentally keyed up for this tournament and a game like tonight's is not going to change that," Bowman said.

The other four teams begin play today with Sweden meeting the U.S.A. in Toronto and Czechoslovakia, defending World Cup champs, meeting the Soviet Union, the Olympic gold medallists, in Montreal.

The Montreal game will be eelevised on CTV starting at 5 p.m. PDT.

Canada's next game is Sunday against the U.S. The round-robin compettition will be completed with a best-of-three championship series for the top two clubs Sept. 13, 15 and 17 if needed.

Lasse Oksanen and Kari Makkonen scored for Finland.

But the victory may have cost Canada the services of its scrappy centre and captain Bobby Clarke who had to be helped to the dressing room midway through the third period with what appeared to be a stretched achilles tendon in his right leg.

He was in considerable pain as he left the ice but was seen limping without any assistance shortly before the team left for Montreal. Bowman said that he would await the results of x-rays before deciding on any changes in the lineup.

Esposito said the team "would miss Clarke a lot" if he misses many games. "I hope he can be back before the tournament ends."

Orr crashed several times into the boards with Finnish players and the crowd of 9,500 appeared to hold its breath waiting to see if his gingery knees had survived another blow.

Afterwards Orr said his knees were fine. "I'm satisfied with them."

Finnish coach Lasse Heikkila said he thought Canada would win the tournament because "it has a much stronger team." Team Canada's play was overpowering and many of the players "were very nice."

His assistant, Carl Brewer, a former top National Hockey League defenceman, said the Finns made too many mistakes but will play better in future games.

He said the youthful Finnish squad were intimidated by the reputations of the Canadian players, their boisterous supporters in the stands and by the small Civic Centre rink.

Martin said the Canadian team played well especially because it used four forward lines. "Playing four lines is usually difficult but everyone played fast and came off soon enough to get the other players back in the game. That way everyone was still warm but fresh."

Perky Hat, Two-Iron Help Margaret Win

MARGARET TODD
. . . one-stroke victory

SAINT JOHN, N.B. (CP) — A little red and white hat and a potent two-iron did the trick for Margaret Todd of Victoria Thursday when she became the 1976 Canadian senior women's golf champion.

Mrs. Todd fired an 11-over par 80 at the 69-par Westfield Golf and Country Club for a two-day total of 158 and a one-stroke victory over teammate Anna - May Taylor of North Vancouver.

Sixty-four took part in the two-day national championships, the first for the 5498-yeard Westfield layout.

"I wouldn't call myself the superstitious type or anything of the sort," said the 58-year-old competitor after her win. "I was thinking of taking off this little red and white hat that I wear but my game was going so well that I thought I had better not."

Mrs. Taylor had the day's best score at 79. She shot 80 Wednesday for a composite score of 159.

A 15-foot putt on the 18th hole spelled the difference for Mrs. Todd, the leader, along with defending champion Pat Heisler of Calgary after Wednesday's opening play with 78. Mrs. Heisler had a 90 Thursday to finish fourth over-all.

"I was really hitting my two-iron well today," said Mrs. Todd. "The course was wet but it didn't seem to bother me. I don't usually hit well with the two-iron but today it was working for me."

Playing with Mrs. Heisler, who had a 49 front nine in Thursday's round, Mrs. Todd went out with a 43 and came in with 37 to finish at 80. Mrs., Taylor had rounds of 41 on the front and 38 on the back.

"As far as I'm concerned, golf is a selfish game," said Mrs. Todd, a five - time member of the B.C. senior team and a nine-time member of the B.C. amateur team.

"You are so wrapped up in your own game that you don't really notice how well the person you are playing with is doing."

The tournament doubled as 36-hole team matches. The B.C. entry finished with 483 for the two days, 32 strokes ahead of runners up Alberta and Quebec. Only the team's top three scores in each day count.

Other standings were: Manitoba, 266-260 — 526; Ontario, 273-260 — 533; Nova Scotia, 274-275 — 549; New Brunswick, 292-269 — 561; Saskatchewan, 280-282 — 561; Prince Edward Island, 285-284 — 569; and Newfoundland, 296-292 — 588.

Bates Make It Four

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. — Stan Kern and Andy Konopacki each pitched a two-hitter Thursday as Victoria Bate extended a victory streak to four games in the Canadian senior "A" men's softball championship tournament.

Defending-champion Victoria is in sole possession of first place in the Red Division following the two victories while Toronto Globals, the Ontario representative, picked up three wins the same day and leads the Blue Division with the same record.

Bates, scheduled to play their last game of round-robin portion of the tourney against Argentia Seals of Newfoundland earlier today, tripped Niagara Falls Dugouts 5-1 and mauled Dartmouth Dairy Queens of Nova Scotia, 12-1.

Kern was outstanding in his first start in the 13-team tourney, striking out nine and allowing no bases on balls against Niagara Falls, the team expected to give Bate the most trouble in preliminary play.

Carl Walker staked Victoria to a 1-0 lead in the first inning. He took first after being hit with a pitch, advanced to second on a passed ball, took third on a fielders choice and scored on a wild pitch.

Pete Songhurst connected for a one-out single to drive in two of four runs in the third inning.

John Lewis gave Nova Scotia a short-lived 1-0 lead with a home run in the second inning — but that was the last hit Konpacki allowed.

Victoria tied things up in the second when Bob Holness singled, advanced on a sacrifice by Jim McMillan and scored on a two-base error. Victoria went ahead to stay with two runs in the fourth inning on a double by Holness and a home run by McMillan.

In other Red Division games, Nova Scotia blanked Northwest Territories 6-0, Newfoundland edged Yukon 4-3 and Alberta tripped Yukon, 6-1.

Pete Landers, who helped pitch Bates to a share of the world title this past January in New Zealand, fired a two-hitter and hit a double to spark Toronto to a 1-0 decision over Saskatoon K and K Olson in a key Blue Division game.

Earlier, Bob Domik ended up with a one-hitter as Toronto blanked Gatineau, Que., 5-0 in the completion of a game halted by rain Wednesday.

Toronto then nudged Charlottetown 6-5 for its third win of the day.

In other Blue Division action, Saskatchewan downed Quebec 2-1 and Manitoba trounced Charlottetown 15-1 and edged New Brunswick, 1-0.

The top two teams in each division advance to the double-loss elimination championship round, which starts Saturday and winds up Sunday.

Fergy's Move No Surprise

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

Cec Ferguson's intention is official, but hardly a surprise.

CEC FERGUSON
. . . five course records

Ferguson announced Thursday that he will sign a contract on Sept. 13 that will guarantee him of at least two years on the U.S. pro circuit.

Until that date, he'll still be an amateur. That will be his status in the CFAX-Metro Toyota Open at Cedar Hill this weekend.

Fergie said he hopes his decision won't cast any bad reflection on the RCGA and its recent investigation.

"I was an amateur then (during the investigation) and I'm still an amateur. That's how I'll play at Cedar Hill," he said. "All I'm saying today is that it is my intention to turn pro by signing an agreement on Sept. 13."

His agreement will be with a syndicate headed by interim trustees Don Carlow, Ted Pollard and Willie Eng.

It was the syndicate's distribution of a brochure entitled "Project Pro, Cec Ferguson" that landed him in hot water with the RCGA.

Ferguson had to submit to the RCGA a sworn declaration saying that he had not signed any agreement. The affidavit, plus the syndicate's claim that it accepted the blame for issuing the brochure without his knowledge, cleared Fergie with the RCGA amateur status committee.

He was allowed to compete in the Canadian Amateur and the Willingdon Cup matches for the interprovincial team championship. Fergie was the No. 2 qualifier on the victorious B.C. team that also included Doug Roxburgh, Johnny Russell and Don Griffiths.

In addition to his third straight appearance on the Willingdon Cup team, Ferguson has won six tournaments, set two course records and tied three — all in one season.

He won the B.C Open (only the second amateur to do so in 39 years); the Vancouver Island, North Island and Simon Fraser Opens, and the Esquimalt Amateur and City Intermediate championships.

He has set records at Glen Meadows (66) and Cedar Hill (57) and equalled marks at Gorge Vale (64), Uplands (64) and Quilchena (64).

Ferguson, accompanied by wife Marilyn and three-year-old daughter Tanya, will leave for the U.S. on the day he signs his agreement. He plans to play and practice in southern California and Arizona until the end of November.

Then he'll head for Brownsville, Tex., in an effort to obtain the players' card required to play in U.S. PGA tournaments. The eight-round qualifying tournament starts Dec. 9.

If he doesn't get his card then, he'll try again next June in North Carolina.

If he has to wait until June, there is a series of 20 tournaments in Florida — the Space Coast Trail — that can occupy his time until the end of March.

The syndicate is offering 100 shares, at $500 a share, in "Project Pro." Ferguson is assured of $25,000 towards expenses in each of his two years.

Ferguson and Carlow both agreed that financial security will make it easier for Ferguson to find success.

Syndication, Carlow added, has been "low key" because of the recent investigation. Even so, the trust fund has enough to support Ferguson, comfortably and without worries, for at least six months.

Now that it's in the open, Ferguson's backers anticipate no problems in fulfilling their obligations.

Janet Stuns Martina In Soggy U.S. Open

FOREST HILLS, N.Y. (AP) — Swedish sensation Bjorn Borg and Argentina's Guillermo Vilas fought off opponents in wind and rain and blonde Janet Newberry supplied the thunder at the water-logged U.S. Open tennis championships Thursday.

Showers which began early Thursday soaked the clay courts at the West Side Tennis Club throughout the day, delaying the start of play for two hours and stopping it for two more during the afternoon. Several matches were postponed and others were played in continuous drizzle on soggy courts.

All of that was just fine with Newberry, a 23-year-old scrambler from La Jolla, Calif. Newberry took on third-seeded Martina Navratilova early in the evening and stunned the Czechoslovakian expatriate 1-6, 6-4, 6-3 in a thrilling centre-court match.

Wade trounced Australian Wendy Turnbull, 6-1, 6-2, and said she didn't mind the rain a bit. "It's lovely, really," said the lady from London. "It's just like being at home."

Richey topped Kathy Harter, 6-3, 7 6, and Reid beat Linda Thomas, 6-3, 6-1. Top seed Chris Evert plays Saturday and second seed Evonne Goolagong plays today.

Borg, the winner of the Wimbledon and U.S. Pro championships, looked devastating in trouncing unheralded Australian Cliff Letcher, 6-2, 6-2. At least Letcher thought so.

"Every ball I hit, I just knew it was going to come back . . . and harder," he said. "He's got to be the toughest I've ever played."

Vilas had slightly more trouble before downing Ross Case of Australia 6-2, 6-4. The lanky third seed coasted through the first set before Case rallied in the second, breaking Vilas to tie at 4-4.

But Vilas, playing mostly in the back court, quickly broke back, then won the final game as Case sent a backhand shot sailing over the base line.

Dave Keeps His Chin Up

Both methods were successful as the two straightened out their shots so well they forged three-under-par 67s Thursday for the opening-round lead in the $300,000 World Series of Golf.

"I've had a couple of weeks of hooking the ball," said Hill. "Jack Tuthill (PGA tournament director) and Frank Chirkinian (CBS-TV producer here) helped me out."

"Jack told me I should just raise my chin a little. Frank tried to get my legs moving. It worked. I only missed two fairways all day."

The first time Murakami, 32, looked down the 400-yard, par-four first hole at Firestone South, he asked, "Is this a par five?"

Aside from his eagle-three on the second hole, Murakami, winner of 14 Japanese tournaments, conceded he struck an errant driver the first four holes.

"I was trying to hit it too hard. I quit pressing on the fifth hole."

Lurking behind the two surprised leaders were the game's big shots in search of the $100,000 first prize.

Jack Nicklaus, winner of four previous Series titles and nearly $389,000 on Firestone South alone, fashioned 68 for third place.

Ill fortune continued to dog Johnny Miller. Just recovered from a hand injury in a motorcycle accident, Miller was assessed a four-shot penalty for 76.

Miller carried an extra club, his boy's putter, for 15 holes. "It was down inside the bag. I didn't know it was in there," he said.

Ben Crenshaw, the year's leading tour money-winner, has a 78, last in the field of 20. He scrambled to one double bogey and six bogeys.

JOHNSON SELECTED

SEATTLE (AP) — The Seattle Mariners have selected Darrell Johnson, former Boston Red Sox manager, to be manager of Seattle's American League team.

The announcement came early today as the Mariners announced a news conference to introduce the new manager.

Colts Trimmed

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Rookie linebacker Garth Ten Napel returned a blocked punt 29 yards for a third-quarter touchdown and three minutes later returned an interception 36 yards to set up another score as Detroit Lions defeated Baltimore Colts 24-9 in a National Football League exhibition game Thursday night.

Clyde Gray Wins

HALIFAX (CP) — Clyde Gray, Canadian and Commonwealth welterweight boxing champion, won a unanimous decision Thursday over Robinson Garcia of New York. Gray, still hoping for a third shot at the world title, had trouble with Garcia but had him clearly beaten and just hanging on in the later rounds.

SAL'S SALARY DOES IT

OAKLAND (AP) — Oakland A's star Sal Bando was nearly sold to Texas Rangers, but the deal collapsed when the Rangers refused to pay the third baseman $600,000 for the next four years, a newspaper reported Thursday.

The A's controversial owner Charles O. Finley told Bando and Wayne Hooper, his agent, about the sale Wednesday morning and negotiations between Hooper and the Rangers began with Finley's okay, the Oakland Tribune said. But no compromise on Bando's salary demands could be made by the deadline for waiver deals.

Meanwhile, Finley's lawyer, Neil Papiano, said he will ask a federal judge in Chicago on Tuesday for a temporary injunction that would allow the $1.5 million sale of Vida Blue to New York Yankees. On June 18, baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn nullified the sale of Blue, and the $2 million package of Rollie Fingers and Joe Rudi to Boston Red Sox, citing "the best interests of baseball."

Campbell River Anglers Experience Hot Returns

This might be an appropriate weekend for southern Vancouver Island fishermen to try their luck further afield — because that's where most of the action may be found.

And one of the hottest areas is around Campbell River.

Tyee as heavy as the 50-pounder landed earlier this week by Ann Pengelley are coming in from Tyee and Frenchman's pools. Trolling with large Lucky Louie plugs or strip has been the most productive method.

Bucktailers using "Grey Ghost", purple and white, green and white or "Coronation" patterns rigged with a No. 2 or 3 metric chrome spinner and fished about four feet behind a five-eighths ounce keel weight have been landing limit catches of coho. Garfield Baxandall was the only noteworthy exception. He recently landed a 22-pounder on strip in Menzies Bay.

Other good spots for coho have been Deepwater Bay, Duncan Bay, off the rivermouth as well as near Willow and Butler points.

Coho to five pounds are providing a little action for both bucktailers and trollers using strip off Floral Island and Point Holmes while the Kitty Coleman area is yielding a few chinooks to 25 pounds.

On the other side of the Island, chinooks to 40 pounls are being landed right up near Port Alberni as well as around Coos Creek, Franklin River and China Creek. All types of terminal gear seem to be working but a rise in water levels could prompt most of the fish to head upriver. The odd coho to eight pounds has also been caught.

* * *

Fishing has picked up considerably off Nanaimo and chinooks to 34 pounds are grabbing Stingsildas, Pirkens and strip offered by strip-casters between the White Marker and Neck Point.

Fishermen working the vicinity of Ballenas Islands and Winchelsea Island are landing coho to 14 pounds on "Grey Ghost" and "Coronation" bucktails.

Chinooks averaging 10 pounds are biting right in Cowichan Bay and along Bold Bluff on the small afternoon runoff following high slack tide and a few smaller chinooks have been boated under the power line north of Maple Bay.

Saanich Inlet boasts fair to good catches of chinooks to eight pounds and coho in the same size range around Goldstream Island, Misery Bay, Indian Bay, Coles Bay and Bamberton.

Fair fishing is reported off Oak Bay with strip yielding chinooks to 19 pounds and a few coho to seven on the Flats and in The Gap.

Compared with the past few weeks, returns are mediocre of the Victoria waterfront with only the odd chinook to 30 pounds and coho to 7½ coming in from Brotchie Ledge.

Strip or anchovies, trolled with from eight ounces to one pound of lead and 50 to 90 feet of line are landing chinooks to 22 and coho to 12 off William Head and in Race Pass. Morning has been the best time to hit the water.

Macs Are Just Fine —And So Is Kevin

By BILL WALKER
Times Staff

Manager Bob Reid of Victoria McDonalds of the Western Canada Major Junior "A" Lacrosse League isn't actually counting his blessings yet, but he will say that the Macs' 16-12 victory over Burnaby Cablevision at New Westminster Wednesday night was one of the club's best games in recent weeks.

Besides, the team is in good shape physically again.

McDonalds meet Burnaby tonight at Esquimalt Sports Centre in the fifth game of the league's best-of-seven final series for the right to represent the west in the Minto Cup final this year. That final will be played in the home of the western winner.

McDonald's win Wednesday was their second straight, the Bakers having lost the first two.

"It has started to be fun again", said Reid, but then he added a word of warning.

"I don't think Cablevision played as well as they can. They tried some things that didn't work and I don't think they will do that again."

Reid praised the club defence especially during the last 10 minutes.

"It was some of the guys who never get the headlines that helped to hold us in there," he said. He also said that coach Bill Munroe's policy of changing from attacking to defensive combinations in the latter part of the game is working well. Although realizing that "we could get burned doing it, it all depends on how well your bench is organized," he said. "And ours has been doing just fine."

Reid also said that league scoring champion Kevin Alexander, who scored six goals Wednesday, is almost back in peak form after suffering from a painful shoulder separation.

"He can shoot underhand now, which he couldn't do after he got hurt and in recent games," said Reid while also admitting that really Alexander shouldn't have been playing in some of the earlier playoff games.

"He couldn't even practice, but he kept playing just so the other clubs wouldn't know how bad the injury was."

Game time tonight is 8 p.m. with the sixth game scheduled for New Westminster Sunday.

Verley Loses In Semi-Finals

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (UPI) — Gordon Verley of Victoria made it to the quarter-finals of the 17th annual World seniors golf championship before losing, 1 up, to Curtis Person of Memphis Wednesday.

Bellies Collect Mann Cup Berth

RICHMOND (CP) — New Westminster Salmonbellies trimmed defending Mann Cup champion Vancouver Burrards, 14-7, Thursday to win their best-of-seven Western Lacrosse Association final series 4-2.

The Salmonbellies advance to the Mann Cup final for the Canadian senior lacrosse championship, travelling to Brampton, Ont., to meet the Brampton Excelsiors in a best-of-seven series.

Excelsiors defeated Fergus Thistles 13-11 Wednesday to win the best-of-seven Ontario Lacrosse Association major series, 4-1.

New Westminster last won the WLA championship in 1974, then won the Mann Cup, downing Windsor Warlocks.

Wayne Goss voted most valuable player of the playoff series, scored two goals and added three assists to pace the Salmonbellies. He had 56 points through the playoffs.

Brian Tasker, who scored a goal and seven assists for new Westminster, took the playoff scoring championship with 17 goals and 41 assists.

Bob Salt and Doug Hayes each scored two goals for Vancouver. Gord Frederickson, Bill Rawson and Taki Vohalis each scored once.

Smith, winner of the Daffodil and Strawberry Cup modified races earlier this season at Western, is favored to make in three in a row Saturday night in the Billy Foster Championship.

He'll be driving the Vantreight Daffodil Special in a bid to move closer to Washington Racing Association leader Bob Cochran of Edmunds in the driver standings. Cochran has 627 points and Smith, defending WRA champ who has seen only limited action this year, has 544.

Other top WRA points men scheduled to drive Saturday include third-place Don McLeod of Tacoma (441), fourth-place Fred Brownfield of Snohomish, Wash. (333) and fifth-place John Tharp of Maple Valley, Wash. (313).

Points picked up in the Foster feature will also count in the Canadian American Modified Racing Association standings, currently led by Doug Larsen of Quesnel. Cochran is second and can move into first place with a win while Victoria's Al Smith, driving Bob Vantreight's car, is third.

Price, who already has clinched the superstock points title at Western, goes after his third straight main event victory in Monday's local [illegible]. He became the first driver at Western to win two in a row last Saturday and if he does it again, he'll collect $300 put up by B.C. Auto Wrecking.

Monday's racing has been moved up to avoid a late-night finish for youngsters heading back to school Tuesday. Gates open at 4 p.m., time trials are at 5 and racing begins at 6.

Races Get Warmer

By The Associated Press

A month ago, the chances for a hot September pennant fight in baseball's National League appeared slim. But now, defending Eastern-champion Pittsburgh Pirates and Los Angeles Dodgers in the West have turned things around.

Thursday, the Pirates pulled to within nine games of Eastern leader Philadelphia Phillies with a 5-0 victory over San Diego Padres. Larry Demery, 9-4, pitched a five-hitter as the Pirates' seventh consecutive victory drew them closer to first place than they've been since July 18.

Pittsburgh has cut 6½ games from Philadelphia's lead since Aug. 24, helped by a six-game losing streak by the leaders.

On Aug. 14, the Dodgers trailed Cincinnati by 13 games. Since then manager Walt Alston's club has won 14 of 16 games to cut the deficit to seven games. The latest triumphs, their third and fourth in a row, came Thursday night in a 2-1, 5-3 sweep of Montreal Expos.

Bobby Murcer drove in five runs as San Francisco Giants ended a five-game losing streak by outscoring New York Mets 10-7 in the only other National League game. Minnesota Twins downed Milwaukee Brewers 8-4 in the only American League game.

Demery's first major league shutout was the sixth complete game in seven starts by Pirate pitchers.

Annual Maple Bay Regatta Holds Holiday Spotlight

AROUND OUR SHORES

The 50 per cent hike from $2 to $3 for charts, which went into effect Aug. 1, makes it look as if the federal government should start cleaning up its own act before putting price curbs on the rest of us.

But checking with regional hydrographer Mike Bolton we find the increase has been given approval in principle by the Anti-Inflation Board.

"We talked to AIB and they said go ahead," Mike reports, pointing out the last time the price of charts was increased was in September 1973.

When you compare the price of charts with those of the United States, that has had price controls much longer than Canada, we really can't grumble. The standard American chart is now up to $3.95.

As usual, the Maple Bay Yacht Club is holding its annual Labor Day Weekend regatta and waters in that area can be expected to look like a marine version of Douglas and Yates on the rush hour during the next two days.

All keel boats will be racing under the Pacific Handicap Racing Fleet handicap. There will be a three-race series for the over-all Cowichan Cup and a long-distance race Sunday for the Lieutenant-Governor's Trophy.

Five-race series are planned for Cal 20s, Lightnings, Snipes, Fireballs, Flying Juniors and Lasers while between five and seven races will be sailed by Sabots and Mirror dinghy sailors.

Being the last and largest regatta of the summer season, the Maple Bay regatta is one of the best events for meeting friends from all parts of the Pacific Northwest.

Paul Jensen's Dania, Doug Bond's Gwahir and Jean Pierre Le Dallic's La Marquise II of the Esquimalt Squadron, Canadian Forces Sailing Association, will be among those racing PHRF at the regatta.

Paul was joined by son Mark and the husband and wife team of Don and Sue Frost last weekend when Dania won the squadron's Le Mans race (boats have to be empty of crews when the start gun goes) to Albert Head. Russ and Kay Gardiner had their sons, Reid and Alan, in Caprice, which was runner-up.

★ ★ ★

Victoria will be well represented in the Laser nationals, to be raced at the Jericho Sailing Centre in Vancouver this weekend. Among those from RVYC will be Tony Rose, Tim Roots and Don Callow while George Kirkwood of CFSA can also be expected to perform well.

The Flying Dutchman nationals will also be raced this weekend in Vancouver. Rick McBride and Ian Pickles will be competing under the RVYC burgee.

★ ★ ★

RVYC finished its Wednesday night series racing this week with John Davies again helming Impatience to first place in Pacific Handicap Racing Fleet competition. Sailing his new Thunderbird, Crazy Jane, in her first race, Andrew McBride placed second. Third was Glen Higgins' Freeway. In Cal 20s it was Bruce Waddington's Sunbeam, followed by Harry Marshall's Tongariro and George Lewis' Sea Fever.

The annual meeting of RVYC's centreboard sailors will take place 8 p.m. Tuesday in the clubhouse on Ripon Road.

Scoring Sprees In Boxla Event

WINDSOR (CP) — Paul Harvey scored nine goals to pace Quebec all-stars to a 52-5 win over Newfoundland all-stars Thursday on the first day of the Canadian Junior B Lacrosse championship.

In other games, Windsor trounced Prince Edward Island all-stars 41-1, Saskatchewan all-stars edged Manitoba all-stars, 17-15, Burnaby downed North Glenora Blues of Alberta, 14-8.

Saanich Midgets Defeated Twice

CALGARY (CP) — New Westminster downed Saanich, 18-10 in A Division play at the Tackaberry national midget championships Thursday. In other A Division play, St. Catharines, nipped Coquitlam 7-6 in overtime, and Burnaby, Norburn dumped Saanich, 22-7. The tournament concludes Sunday.

Roxburgh Defeated

LOS ANGELES — Doug Roxburgh of Vancouver was eliminated but another Canadian, Kelly Roberts of London, scored a mild upset in the U.S. amateur golf championships.

Roxburgh was a 3-and-2 victim of Stan Souza of Honolulu while Roberts topped Jaime Gonzales of Rio de Janeiro, 1 up.

Roberts grabbed a three-up lead on the front nine of the par 70, 6507-yard Bel-Air Country Club layout but the long-hitting Brazilian won the 10th, 12th and 13th holes with pars.

The Canadian won the 15th and 16th holes as Gonzales sprayed drives, but lost the 17th to a par. When the 18th was halved, the Canadian advanced to the next round of play while Gonzales heads for Oklahoma State University where he has one year remaining on a golf scholarship.

British amateur champion and a former U.S. champ, Dick Siderowf, who had to struggle to survive a first-round upset, pulled his game together to trim Edwards Barnes of Georgia, 5 and 4.

"I played better today," he said "than during the first two rounds, but I'm still not satisfied with my game."

Siderowf's opponent this morning will be Parker Morre Jr. of Laurens, S.C., who sidelined Gregory Farrow of Moreton, U.Y., 4 and 3.

Another strong title contender is Mike Reid, a former all-America golfer from Brigham Young University who was low amateur in the 1976 U.S. Open tournament. He moved up with a 3 and 1 victory over Gilbert Cavanaugh of Jericho, N.Y.

Swedes Launch Yacht For Americas Cup

STENUNGSUND, Sweden (AP) — The Swedish yacht to challenge in next year's 23rd Americas Cup series was launched Wednesday in the presence of the king and queen of Sweden.

A syndicate of 50 Swedish companies has given financial backing to Sweden's first America's cup challenger — Sverige.

Total cost was understood to be about $962,000.

As a principle, when declarer is playing a hand in a trump suit, as soon as he obtains the lead he gathers in the adversely held trumps. But all principles have their exceptions, as was demonstrated in today's deal.

Opening lead: Jack of ◇.

After winning West's opening diamond lead with dummy's ace, declarer promptly led a trump off dummy — and East discarded a heart. Although declarer didn't know it at this point, this slam contract had just gone down the drain. Declarer won the trick with his ace.

He next played the ace of clubs, and followed up by leading a second club, which he ruffed in dummy as East's queen fell. He was now unable to return to the South hand to ruff a third club (except via the trump king or by ruffing a second round of hearts). Eventually his slam contract was defeated.

Observe, if you will, the rather meticulous line of play declarer must adopt to fulfill his six-spade contract. After winning the opening diamond lead with the board's ace, South leads a club to his ace, after which he ruffs a club. NOW a trump is led to South's ace, and a third club lead is ruffed as East's king falls. South's jack of clubs has just become a winner..

The heart ace is then cashed, as is the diamond queen. Next comes a trump to South's king, and this is followed by the spade jack, West taking his queen. South wins West's return of either a diamond or a club, cashes his spade ten to pick up West's nine-spot, and claims his contract.

If you have the feeling that you would not have played the hand in winning fashion, don't despair. When it arose in the 1956 National Team-of-Four Championships, our South declarer was Howard Schenken, one of the world's greatest players. At trick two he led a trump to his ace — and bit the dust. And if Schenken did it, surely we mere mortals should not censure ourselves.

"Look, it's what the book says," said Bob. "King Kronrus has about a hundred thousand soldiers assembled there."

Steve laughed. "You know I can't read kalotan. So he did have them all in one huge solid square?"

"Sure. Just the right number for it," replied Bob. "Then he picked three of them as personal aides, and 11 others as leaders and made the rest form into 11 solid squares all with the same numbers of men. Believe it or not, there were exactly the right number of that too."

Don't believe all you read on the history of ancient Kalota! But how many soldiers would the king have had there?

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A 20-year-old Sooke man Thursday became the second person charged in Victoria provincial court and the first to plead guilty in connection with a large-scale Sooke disturbance on the night of Aug. 13-14.

Randall Lee Vowles, 20, of 2005 Kaltasin, whose rented home was the scene of the largest part of the incident, pleaded guilty before Judge Blake Allan to a two-count Sooke charge of mischief by damaging a police car and assaulting a Sooke RCMP constable.

Prosecutor Robert Mulligan suggested a pre-sentence report and Vowles was remanded to Sept. 29 for sentence, remaining free on a promise to appear.

Mulligan said Sooke and Colwood RCMP were called about 2 a.m. Aug. 14 to the area of Vowles' residence, where about "150 youths were drinking on the roadway, shouting and otherwise disrupting the neighborhood."

The prosecutor said Constable K. J. Morris asked Vowles if he "he could bring some of the others under control." Vowles hit Morris in the face with a fist and was arrested by other officers. Vowles "struggled and resisted all the way" to a police car and, once inside, kicked out a window and damaged the interior.

Mulligan said the damage was estimated at $227. One other person charged Wednesday, with possession of a weapon for a purpose dangerous to the public peace in the same incident chose higher-court trial and will have a preliminary hearing date set shortly.

Sixty-day jail terms were set by Allan for Neil Emerson Gilmer, 20, of Regina, and Peter Richard Masten, 30, no fixed address, who pleaded guilty to a Victoria charge of a break-in with intent early Wednesday at Speedway Motors, 971 Yates.

Masten admitted a record of three 1974 convictions in New Brunswick and said he was still on a form of parole while Gilmer admitted one 1976 conviction on his record. They arrived in Victoria last week and had been living in Gilmer's car.

Mulligan said a police report indicated the two had been drinking and apparently planned to take a radio from the car firm's office.

Richard William Barker, 23, of 502 Craigflower, was charged with trafficking in marijuana early Thursday in Victoria and possession of marijuana at about the same time for the purpose of trafficking.

Barker said he wanted to consult a lawyer and was remanded for one week by Allan, who ended a bail hearing by approving Barker's release on an undertaking to return.

At the request of Legal Aid duty counsel Jane Morley, Allan issued an order prohibiting publication or broadcast of bail-hearing details.

One punch cost money and time for Douglas Wayne Spence, 20, of 1417 Pembroke, who pleaded guilty to a Saanich charge of willful damage early Aug. 17 at a cabaret in the Red Lion, 3366 Douglas.

Spence had been asked to leave the cabaret and was being escorted out when he punched his fist through a door window. At the time he was on probation for a 1975 Victoria conviction for mischief, which is willful damage of more than $50.

Allan fined Spence $150, extended the probation by six months and gave Spence one month to pay $33 for the damage.

Victoria area resident Richard Allan Murray, 17, address not known, pleaded guilty to three charges containing a total of six counts and was remanded in custody by Judge F, S. Green to Sept. 30 for a presentence report and sentence.

One was a Victoria charge containing four counts of false pretences resulting from four worthless cheques written July 21-26 to obtain goods worth $249. The second was a Victoria charge of a July 27 break-in and theft of various items from an apartment at 1388 Hillside and the third was a Saanich charge of car theft July 28.

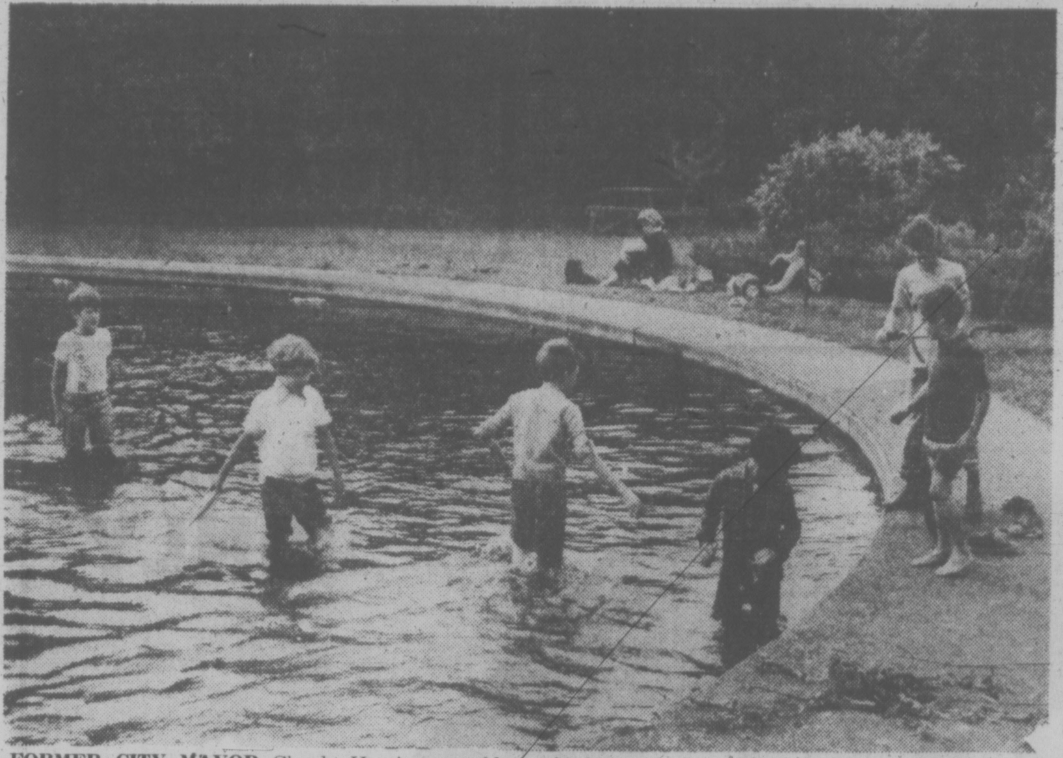
A plan of not guilty was entered by Sandor Borbely, 36, of 1655 Chambers, who chose trial by provincial court judge on a Victoria charge of possession of a knife Aug. 18 for a purpose dangerous to the public peace. Allan set the trial for Dec. 22 and Borbely is free on $500 bail until then.



FORMER CITY MAYOR Claude Harrison would have been delighted Wednesday to see the model yacht pool he had built on Dallas Road getting enthusiastic use. Most of the waders were boat-less but yachts and wading youngsters are compatible on a summer's day. (Bill Halkett photo)

Irish Move to 'Crush' IRA Could Cramp Press Freedom

By BERNARD NOSSITER
Washington Post

DUBLIN — The Irish government is pushing through Parliament a package of measures that Premier Liam Cosgrove says should "crush" the Irish Republican Army (IRA).

Whether the package can inflict any substantial damage, however, is unclear.

But one thing is clear — the measures are alarming Dublin editors who fear their freedom to report and write could be severely cramped.

There is little doubt that the Cosgrave package will be enacted, although possibly with some minor changes. The government enjoys a solid majority in Parliament and the opposition party is staging only a token fight. It does not want to be labelled as "pro-IRA" or soft on law and order.

In Parliament, Cosgrave insisted that his government must have the "emergency powers necessary to crush the armed conspiracy." Their adoption, he said, would signal that the government is "pledged to break and rid our country once and for all of his conspiracy of hate and evil."

In private, his ministers are more restrained. Conor Cruise O'Brien, a distinguished writer and minister for posts and telegraphs, said the bills are designed "as far as possible to tighten the screws on the IRA. Nobody is under the delusion that this package spells an end to the IRA or the culture that motivates it."

This more modest — and most observers would agree more plausible — estimate of the bills' impact contrasts with the journalists' concern. "We will have to trim our sails, tack and reef and hope we don't go down," said Tim Pat Coogan, editor of The Irish Press.

The IRA is the terrorist-guerrilla organization whose 800 or so gunmen are trying to violently force Northern Ireland's Protestant majority into a union with the predominantly Catholic republic here in the south. The IRA revived its century-old campaign seven years ago after mobs of Protestants and the Protestant-dominated police in the north attacked Catholics seeking equal rights there.

The new Dublin measures have not been provoked by increased violence. Killings by IRA and Protestant murder squads in the north have been running at a steady one-a-day tempo this year. But in July, the British ambassador to Ireland, Christopher Ewart-Biggs, and his secretary were killed by a land mine. This event took place in Dublin — not the north — and that triggered Cosgrave's moves.

One provision of Cosgrave's package would increase the penalty for IRA membership — a crime that can be "proven" on the sworn opinion of a ranking police official — from two to seven years in jail. A second crucial clause would jail up to 10 years anyone who "supports" the IRA, even implicitly.

The rest of the package would enable the army as well as the undermanned police to make searches and arrests, and would increase the maximum penalties for obstructing the government by force, helping an escaped prisoner, kidnapping, planning an illegal military exercise, taking part in banned meetings and the like.

Irish journalists are chilled by the sweeping nature of the provision outlawing support for the IRA. Its scope can be measured by examining the full text:

"Any person, who expressly or by implication, directly or through another person or persons, or by advertisement, propaganda or any other means, incites or invites another person (or persons generally) to join an unlawful organization or to take part in, support or assist its activities shall be guilty of an offence and shall be liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding 10 years."

One editor of a major daily newspaper here said this clause would bar him from sending a reporter to interview anyone in the IRA or its fronts and might even stop him from publishing charges of brutality levelled against British soldiers in Ulster.

And the Irish Times has editorially deplored "a lamentable absence of regret for the reduction in civil liberties" created by the package.

In any event, the Cosgrave package is not likely to shatter the IRA. The Premier himself demonstrated why. Across the border in Ulster this year, an average of one person a day has been killed violently and four have been injured; in the republic since 1974, the murder rate is one every 20 days and, for injuries, one every four days.

"This won't affect the campaign, the units actually fighting," boasts Andreas O'Callaghan, a young member of the Provisionel Sinn Fein Executive, the IRA's political front.

"Our political wing will suffer but not the numbers in Derry, Belfast and South Armagh," the Northern Ireland hot spots.

The government has been hinting broadly that its prime targets are the leaders of provisional Sinn Fein who operate more or less openly from their Kevin Street headquarters here. Several have already been jailed briefly for IRA membership. Now the government expects judges will use the stiffer membership penalties to jail them for three to four years.

This, O'Callaghan acknowledges, would "smash a few holes in the (IRA) military, but it would not mean one less bomb in Belfast."

Moreover, says O'Callaghan, the new measures will frighten people from attending Sinn Fein meetings, make it harder to disseminate propaganda and force IRA newspapers underground. This, he concedes, would help to dampen IRA morale.

Great U.K. Drought . . . Worst to Come?

LONDON (UPI) — At last British weather seems to be back to normal — grey clouds, cool temperatures, frequent spitting rain.

Is it over, then — the worst drought in five centuries?

It is not.

The national water council, trying to dispel the complacency that near-normal weather has created, puts it plainly:

"If you're waiting for rain to solve the water shortage, forget it. It will take more than a few showers to top up our supplies."

In some respects the worst is yet to come. Even if it rains steadily from now until spring — and forecasters expect no such thing — the effects of the great British drought of '76 will last for years.

Take one example: Aquifers.

For all of its famous rain, the British depend for water supplies largely on underground aquifers — porous layers of limestone or chalk saturated with water filtered down from the surface.

Fifteen months of below-average rainfall dramatically lowered water levels in these aquifers and not enough of the pumped-out water was replaced.

So now salt water has begun to seep in from the sea. In some low-lying coastal areas crops have been affected. In others, it will take years to make the underground water pure again.

Take another example: the landscape.

Never has the green and pleasant land of England been so brown.

Brownish-colored lawns and grassy pastures eventually will revive. Fields prematurely brown with a dessicated harvest will be green again.

But hundreds of thousands of trees are gone forever — killed in raging forest fires or dying in hedgerows and parks. The gaps will show for years.

Do not be misled. Britain is not a desert yet, and may never be one. The autumn crocus is in bloom and there is a profusion of roses.

In most cities water restrictions are not a hardship, but mostly a curiosity, although it is still illegal to wash a car or use a garden hose on wilting flowers.

Only in spots has water rationing hit hard. Homes in parts of Wales have water only seven hours out of 24. Rationing in the island of Jersey is severe.

The water supply to the homes of 750,000 persons in southwest Yorkshire is to be turned off and community standpipes set up in the streets. The decision taken by Yorkshire water authority Wednesday affects such towns as Dewsbury and Wakefield, and it will take at least two weeks to complete.

Major cities like Leeds are ready to cut off water completely to houses and install community taps instead — one tiny street corner faucet to serve two or three city blocks. This has not happened yet.

Rainfall was below normal in the winter of 1974-75. The summer of 1975 was a bonanza for tourists, a marvel for wine growers, a bumper sunny season for crops. It hardly ever rained.

Warnings were voiced then that Britain needed more reservoirs, a nationwide pipeline grid, more big wells to tap underground sources not yet touched.

But nobody listened.

The winter of 1975-76 was mild, sunny — and dry. Spring rains were light and April showers few. Then in June came the great heat wave — two weeks of temperatures in the unprecedented 90s, baking brick hard the already dry earth.

Statisticians calculated that British rainfall over a 15-month period was between a quarter and a third below normal.

Reservoir levels dropped and their dry beds split with deep cracks. Vegetable prices began to climb. Livestock was slaughtered early for lack of feed.

Need Gas? Put a Tree In the Tank

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Worried about a gasoline shortage? Put a tree in your tank, says a Nobel Prize-winning scientist.

Dr. Melvin Calvin, honored in 1961 for his work in discovering the chemistry of photosynthesis, said Wednesday that crude oil and gasoline may be produced easily from a gopher plant and its cousin, the Avaloz, which grow in California.

Calvin said most plants use photosynthesis to turn the sun's energy into sugar, but the Avaloz and gopher plant, like the rubber tree, produce hydrocarbons instead. Crude oil is mostly hydrocarbon.

Calvin told a meeting of the American Chemical Society that scientists in Brazil already are using sugar cane to produce alcohol fuel for cars, and that he believed it would be a matter of only a few years before the United States turned to "gasoline trees" to replace dwindling stocks of fossil fuel.

Newspapers Food for . . . Dinner

LONDON (Reuter) — Future generations may be fed on food extracted from old newspapers and household products, a university professor said here today.

Prof. Clement Bamford, a chemist from Liverpool University, told the British Association for the Advancement of Science that glucose could be obtained from newspapers by adding yeast.

He said hydrocarbon could come from oils, gasoline and kerosene, and enzymes now used in the weekly wash to soak out stains could be used in the future to make food out of things now considered inedible.

The Falling Price of Sugar: How Sweet It Is

Canadian Press

Canadian food shoppers who become soured on sugar when prices soared a couple of years ago are seeing a sweeter picture these days.

The cost of sugar, one of the most expensive staples in the pantry since 1974, dropped sharply in August to its lowest level since 1973.

Melville Davidson, president of the Canadian Sugar Institute in Toronto, said the lower prices area result of a world surplus of sugar cane.

"Refiners are passing on the savings which come from a global supply exceeding consumer demand," he said. "And this year, we anticipate a global surplus from two to four million metric tons."

Davidson said the sugar industry is happy to see the decline in prices because "those prevailing two years ago were the worst we'd seen in 50 years."

In late 1974, five-pound bags of sugar cost as much as $3 and while the cost levelled off until early 1975, prices began to slide in late 1975 and early 1976.

However, spokesman for both the Bakery Council of Canada and the Confectioners Association of Canada declined to say if the cost of their products would decline because of the reduction in the price of sugar.

Douglas Heagle, president of the Bakery Council, said he "couldn't answer for the industry"

"You don't simply look at the cost of ingredients in bakery products," he said. "You have other costs such as energy, labor ... and it becomes a balancing act. In other words, we have many more hidden costs to consider than say four or five years ago."

Philip Moyes, general manager of the Confection Manufacturers, said "sugar prices may be down, but what is really worrisome to the industry now is the climbing cocoa market."

The survey of the monthly food basket is conducted in the same supermarkets in each of 12 cities on the last Tuesday of each month.

The 17-item survey includes one pound each of sirloin-tip roast, all-beef wieners, centre-cut pork loin roast, top-grade chicken, ground chuck steak, frozen cod fillets, top-grade butter, tomatoes, frozen green peas, drip coffee and apples.

Also included are one dozen medium-sized eggs, one quart of whole milk, a 24-ounce loaf of sliced white bread, 10 pounds of first-grade potatoes, two kilograms of white granulated sugar and a 28-ounce can of halved pears.

SUMMER'S WORK is displayed by Toronto children who took part in a summer enrichment program this summer. The result included this main attraction resembling a spider's web made of string. More than 1,000 children took part in the program.

Lid Shortage Due to Hoarding?

By LYNNE GORDON

caveat emptor

If there is a shortage of lids for canning jars this year, it's because consumers are hoarding them, says a food specialist for a provincial department of agriculture.

Carol Nelson, of the Ontario Food Council, says that manufacturers have been producing lids as fast as they can and that no shortages, such as the one experienced across the country last year, are expected. Unless, of course, consumers panic and stockpile lids they don't need, thus creating a false demand.

Lids are the one compound in the preserving process that must be replaced each year. For years there was no problem in supplying the demand but suddenly as more consumers turn to canning in an attempt to combat the food price spiral, shortages will develop.

And it hit hardest those who have been home-canning for years. That's because they already had their jars and needed only replacement lids. But manufacturers were too busy manufacturing lids to go with jars that were being gobbled up by newcomers to the home-canning scene and didn't have time to get around to supplying the replacement lid market.

The whole situation should be considerably improved this year. Manufacturers have been working hard to meet the demand; and among other reasons, many newcomers to homecanning have simply given up. It's not as easy as it sounds — and certainly not as "profitable."

Home-canning is a lot of work and unless it's done properly can result in spoilage and considerable loss in time, energy and money. What's more, there's every indication that home-canning won't save on the food bill, unless you grow your own produce. But if you're buying the fruit and vegetables at market prices, it's unlikely that you're paying any less than you would if you purchased commercially canned foods as you need them throughout the year.

The number one rule for anyone considering canning is the jars. It is recommended that you use only standard mason jars, not empty glass jars from commercial products like pickles, jams or mayonnaise. You simply can't get proper enclosures for them that will pull a vacuum seal.

Also, they are not tempered to withstand rapid changes in temperature such as they experience if you're using the hot water processor or a pressure canner.

"Empties", would probably be alright for jams, jellies and possibly some pickles but NOT for other forms of canning.

Remember that you can't get closures for many of the old type of jars. In fact, Ms. Nelson says that there's only one basic type of a replacement lid on the market and it fits what's known as the GEM jar. Standard mason jars are also good to have, because any company's replacement lid will fit any other company's glass jar, provided it's a mason jar.

There are some "old-new" ideas coming to the market this year. Remember the old-fashioned canning jars that had the metal band, a glass lid and a rubber band for the closure? It's, virtually impossible to get replacements for them these days. Yet many home-makers prefer them to the modern types of lids.

Apparently there's a return to the old-fashioned style with the rubber ring, but, instead of a glass lid, you will get a metal disc on top of the rubber ring held down by a metal ring band. The interesting thing is that this is not being made as a replacement for the old jars, but as a replacement lid for mason jars.

People who are planning to can this year, especially newcomers to the art, are encouraged to use only tested and approved methods of home-canning. Don't forget that there is always the danger of spoilage, which is not only a waste, but may be a health hazard.

Crisis Map For Adults

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A young Ivy League graduate charges off to law school, his imagination naively flushed with fantasies of invincibility. It's his time for the Trying Twenties.

Like the song, the 30-year-old junior executive wonders, "Is that all there is?" He doesn't know what is missing, but he itches to expand his boundaries. He's caught in the clutches of the Catch 30s.

"I can't blame those wrinkles on my smiling eyes any longer," muses the housewife, 35. It's half-time in her life, and she feels the pressure to form a game plan for the second half. It's the dawn of her Deadline Decade.

Trying Twenties, Catch-30s and Deadline Decade are some of life's landmarks as plotted in "Passages: Predictable Crises of Adult Life," a new book by journalist Gail Sheehy.

Miss Sheehy, 39, contends that almost all adults face crises, or passages, in their lives which can be predicted and perhaps coped with. Her best-selling book, she says, attempts to serve as a sort of map, charting the personality changes common to each stage of life.

The original idea, Miss Sheehy said, was to research the notion that adults go through stages similar to the "Terrible Twos" and "Noisy Nines" of childhood.

"We've not been very good to ourselves as adults," she said. "I mean, here we are, out there trying to make sense of the world as its most active members, and so much time is spent studying children and adolescents that we almost totally ignore ourselves."

In the course of her three years of research, Miss Sheehy interviewed hundreds of adults, compiled 115 case studies and consulted more thon 30 psychologists and analysts. But after wading through all that material, she said, she had to make a "passage" of her own before beginning to write.

"It was a big step when I decided I had the right to do that sort of book," said Miss Sheehy, who previously had written about such nonscientific subjects as the Black Panthers and New York prostitutes.

"For me, it was a breaking out of a pigeon-holing role where people would say: 'Look, you're a journalist, you can't write a scientific book.' I was totally determined not to use the jargon the professionals use to set themselves apart from the public.

"I don't think it's necessary to put psychology into abstract prose no one but psychologists understand. I decided that if I couldn't figure a way to say it in a way I could understand, then I had failed as a writer, which is supposed to be my area of expertise."

Hydroponics—Are They All Wet?

THE MOTHER EARTH NEWS®

One of MOTHER's most industrious friends over the years has been James DeKorne from down New Mexico way. His experiments with alternative energy sources and methods of food production have inspired many a do-it-yourselfer.

Now he's on to something new: organic hydroponics.

"Hold on, there," you say. "Hydro-WHAT??"

Hydroponics, as it is generally practiced, is the growing of plants in water contained dissolved inorganic nutrients rather than in soil. Gravel is usually used as a medium for root support, and a balanced mixture of the necessary nutrients is periodically fed to the plants in liquid form. It's a high-yield method of production that allows extension of the normal growing season.

But dyed-in-the-wool organic gardeners have traditionally given the cold shoulder to hydroponics, viewing it as unnatural and unhealthy. The subject is generally dismissed with a couple of very good questions:

(1) Aren't foods grown hydroponically less nutritious than those grown organically?

(2) What about those hydroponic chemicals? Aren't they made from the same chemical fertilizers that organic gardening tries to avoid?

The answer to the first question is a resounding "No!" Laboratory tests in studies both here and abroad have shown that there are no nutritional differences between vegetables grown hydroponically and those grown in gardens, organic or otherwise. Soil improvement from organic techniques can increase the size and yield of crops, but the nutrition factor isn't altered.

The second question draws a reluctant "Yes." Commercial hydroponic solutions are, for the most part, derived from fossil fuels, or vast amounts of those fuels are used in their manufacture. And though some comfort can be found in not using those chemicals on the soil, the dwindling supply of those fossil fuels remains a fact.

So there's the rub. But if you could come up with ORGANIC hydroponic solutions, you'd have the best of both worlds. And that's what DeKorne is doing.

Using both well water and fish tank effluent (which contains extra organic material), DeKorne prepared several different strengths, mixes and types of organic solutions . . . in effect, making what is familiar to most organic gardeners as "manure teas." He used those various liquids to grow tomatoes, radishes, lettuce and several kinds of beans. At the same time, he fed identical plants with a commercial hydroponic solution.

In general, vegetables raised in the commercial solution grew slightly faster than the organic-solution plants, but not significantly so. The most striking difference between the two was that the organic-solution plants didn't wilt during the hottest part of the day, while plants raised with the commercial solution almost always wilted!

The experiments took place inside a greenhouse where the temperature often went over 100 degrees F. in the summer. Within five minutes of being fed the organic nutrient solution, however, all wilt symptoms disappeared.

How does organic hydroponics affect you? If your presently produce much or all of your own produce, the immediate advantages are pretty obvious — higher yields, longer growing season, no insecticides and no weeding.

But if, like most folks, you buy your fruits and vegetables, there are still advantages. Many people are concerned about the effect of agricultural chemicals on the soil. And while the world's population continues to swell, the amount of fertile land does not. An alternative form of food production may well be vital to the future of the planet.

And regardless of who presently produces your food or how, what will happen when the "necessary" agricultural chemicals triple in cost — or run out?

Does it still hold that if a woman has had one Caesarean delivery that subsequent children will be born in the same way? — Mrs. J. D. D.,

Dear Mrs. D.:

It was once considered a medical adage that "once a Caesarean always a Caesarean." This is based on the fact that the pelvic bones of the mother do not change during later pregnancies.

In most instances, the delivery of a child by Caesarean birth is due to the fact that the child is too large to pass through the normal vaginal canal. Hence, an incision is made in the lower part of the abdominal wall for the rapid delivery of the child.

In some instances, even if there is no unusual discrepancy between the size of the child and the mother's pelvic bones, the operation is performed when the baby's life is threatened by too long a period of labor.

It is estimated that about one out of every 40 deliveries is done by Caesarean section.

The only way it can be determined if subsequent pregnancies will require Caesarean section is to discuss with your doctor the basic reasons that made the original one necessary.

Dear Mrs. E.:

There is no relationship between the two, from a physical point of view.

There is, however, a great possibility that stuttering may be the end result of undue pressure that is placed on lefthanded children to convert them to right-handedness.

There was a time in our society when the left-handed person was made to feel stigmatized, almost as if he had a deformity.

The important attitude is to allow the child the freedom of functioning in the way that is most comfortable for him. No pressure should be put on him to change from one hand to the other.

Stand Together

DEAR ABBY: My son is being married soon. His father and I have been divorced for two years now. Do we have to sit together in the church and stand together in the receiving line just as though we were still married to each other?

Neither one of us has married again, but he has a shack-up girl friend. Where does she fit in? She is the pushy type who would do anything just to get into the limelight.

If she shows up, would it be proper for me to haul her into the alley and give her a few wallops before the ceremony? I'd sure like to. Thank you.

GROOM'S MOM

DEAR MOM: If the shack-up girl friend shows up, resist the urge to haul her into the alley and give her a few wallops. She could haul you into court for assault and battery.

You and the groom's father should sit "with the family" in the church — and stand together in the receiving line.

DEAR ABBY: My niece, who is 14 years old, ran off with her boyfriend last week, intending to elope. The boy is 15.

My brother (the girl's father) is very upset about it. He called the police and had his daughter and her "fiance" brought back.

Now the question: These kids are very much in love and want to marry. My brother is opposed to the idea because they are so young. I say, as long as the kids have spent a week together, why not let them marry and see how it works out?

What do you say?

CONCERNED UNCLE

DEAR CONCERNED: I think the kids should grow up before assuming the responsibilities of marriage. Having spent a week together is not sufficient reason to permit two children to marry.

DEAR ABBY: My mother is a widow. She raised my brother and me alone, and it wasn't easy. She does janitor work nights and is barely able to make ends meet.

My brother and his wife are going away for a two-week vacation, and they asked Mom if she would stay at their place to look after their dog. Mom said she would. My brother wants to charge her $25 a week. He says, "Where else can she get free room and board with a free telephone and color TV for that little?"

He wouldn't have to provide food for Mom because she's on a special diet and she buys her own.

I told my brother he ought to be ashamed of himself, and he said I was the one who was wrong — Mom's $50 would come in handy on their vacation.

Who's right?

DONNIE

DEAR DONNIE: You are. Your mother should be paid for staying there. Furthermore, your brother must have a cash register where his heart belongs.

DEAR ABBY: I am a man who likes to keep house, embroider, knit and do all the things ladies like to do. There is nothing wrong with me, but I do take a bit of kidding about it.

What is a good answer to these wiseacres?

SAM

DEAR SAM: Don't say anything when you're kidded. He who EXCUSES himself, ACCUSES himself.

The Formula

There are a number of different ways to sport fish depending on the preference of the fisherman. While all methods have their place, many sportsmen are adamant in their belief that dry fly fishing is the "king of the sport." Of course, many an argument has centred around this contention.

Dry fly fishing requires that the line, rather than the bait, be cast. This carries the fly, which is attached to the line via a transparent leader, to the spot the fisherman selects. But a dry fly must float to simulate an insect on the surface of the water, so the line must float as well to prevent it from pulling the fly under. To insure against this happening, the line (linen or flax—not monofilament) must be dressed periodically. Here's a formula that makes a good line dressing, simply and inexpensively.

You'll need two tablespoons ANHYDROUS LANOLIN, two tablespoons PETROLATUM and one teaspoon CASTOR OIL. Put these three ingredients in the top of a double boiler and heat until they are melted and can be stirred together. Allow to cool down to just above the solidification point and pour into a mold, such as a small cardboard box. To use, rub line over dressing, making sure that all areas are coated.

U.S. Women Alcoholics Number One in Three

NEW YORK (AP) — Women of all ages and walks of life now constitute a third of the United States' estimated nine million alcoholics, the Health Insurance Institute reports.

This one-out-of-three compares with past estimates that indicated that one of every five alcoholics was a woman. According to a U.S. government survey, women make up the largest increase in the problem drinking population in recent years.

Women who drink to excess, experts say, tend to blame family disagreements. Men are more likely to attribute it to job problems. Women alcoholics are also more likely to lapse into deep depression than men and often suffer greater social isolation.

Most insurance companies now make available to alcoholics who have been placed under medical supervision disability insurance which will cover them during periods when they are unable to work, the institute notes.

Give Them Enough Rope And They'll Skip It . . .

Washington Post

LOS ANGELES — Back in the 18th century, Marie Antoinette did it. Actress Natalie Wood and Los Angeles Laker Kermit, basketball player in Washington are doing it now.

It's the newest physical fitness craze to come out of body-conscious Los Angeles and, like bike riding and jogging, is bound to spread all over sooner or later.

Southern Californians are discovering the joys and benefits of jumping rope as an alternative for cardiovascular conditioning, which is a fancy way of saying it improves the supply of oxygen to the heart.

According to David Luna, who describes himself as an exercise physiologist, "People are getting bored with jogging and some are too embarrassed to go running out in the street. But jumping rope can be done in the privacy of your own basement, garage, backyard or bedroom," if you're sure the beams can stand it. Luna, physical fitness director of the International Health Club and Spa in Los Angeles, said jumping rope is also great for the traveller because "the jump rope fits easily in a suitcase."

It's one form of conditioning Luna uses in training some of the Lakers' basketball team. "Many of the players aren't in such good condition when they come to me," he said. "In addition to its effectiveness in development of the cardiovascular system, it's great for endurance, stamina and stretch and for elevating the pulse rate."

And Luna said, "Women don't have to worry about getting muscle-bound (when they jump rope) because they have larger layers of subcutaneous fat. Jumping rope tightens muscles in calves, thighs, upper arms and chest without making them bulge."

But the U.S. east coast hasn't gotten wind of the virtues of rope jumping, unless, as one health club director suggested, "it's happening behind closed doors in people's bedrooms."

A survey of health clubs and recreation centres in the area indicates that the only people who are jumping rope are those who always have: boxers, football and basketball players and little girls 8 to 15.

A former Mr. Universe was quoted recently as saying that jumping rope will "never make a 98-pound weakling into the Numero Uno of body building, but five minutes a day will certainly help the businessman who feels he's out of shape."

One of L.A.'s well-known pop art painters, Joe Goode, jumps rope 10 minutes every afternoon. He said it was a social as well as physical necessity. "Every time you go to a party, what do people talk about? Their exercise programs and diets. And more people are talking about rope jumping these days," Goode said.

California sporting goods stores are selling jump ropes as fast as they do tennis shoes. A suitable length of mother's old clothes line (from what few mothers still have clothes lines) won't do for some people. Jump ropes with handles sell for as little as $1.99 or as much as $10.95, the latter deluxe version with rope made of leather and handles containing ball bearings so that the handles remain stationery while the rope turns.

There's even a book out on the sport, called "Jump Rope!" Written by Peter K. Skolnick, it has sold 55,000 copies.

Skolnick has devised a jump-rope program that is illustrated in the book. It begins with one week of a two-minute workout and works up to a 15-minute session after 10 weeks.

For the novice jumper Luna has some words of advice. "The biggest mistake beginners make," he said, "is jumping high and hard, which can create shin splints and puts a shock on the joints and a tremendous amount of pressure on the back." Luns said to jump only high enough for the rope to go under the feet; to bend the knees and land lightly on the feet. He recommends soft-soled shoes, like those for track or tennis. And he said there are some people, like those with back or knee injuries or with flat feet, who should not jump.

Though Wide World of Sports has yet to televise the world's championship of rope jumping, enthusiasts say it's only a matter of time before it joins such other spectaculars as the national skateboard championship.

By LYNN and JOEL RAPP

DEAR LYNN AND JOEL

Recently a lady asked your advice about plants for a dark bathroom. I, too, have a dark bathroom, but I solved the problem by using Bromeliads. I chipped out a hollow in one of my driftwood pieces (a small one) enough to hold about two heaping tablespoonfuls of potting soil. I tamped this solidly around the base of the plant. I spray the leaves and they seem to thrive on humidity. Mine also grow in lots of light or outside in the shade. I love them. Keep giving your splendid advice, your column is delightful. — C.C.

DEAR C.C.:

We recall the column in question wherein we recommended Pothos, or Cordatum as hanging plants and perhaps a Chinese evergreen, a small Neanthe Bella Palm or even a Sasevieria as accent. We didn't think of recommending Bromeliads because, frankly, we find that ours and most others do better when they can get the benefit of light and then have a fighting chance to produce the glorious flowers (inflorescence) that they do. We'd still hesitate to recommend Bromeliads for darker spots, but if it works for you, it could work for someone else. If a reader out there wants to give it a try, give the credit to C.C. and the blame to same address.

A Look at Some Biennials

Young seedling plants of biennials will have been growing well this summer, for they like cool weather conditions. If they have received plentiful watering they should now be in good condition.

First, let us take a look at what biennials are. Basically, they belong to a group of plants which are grown from seeds sown in June of one year to bloom in spring and early summer the following year. The plants are by then exhausted, and are discarded to the compost heap.

Examples of biennials easily grown to perfection here in Victoria area are Canterbury-bells (Companula calycanthema) also known as Cup-and-Saucer campanula; Sweet-william (Dianthus barbatus); Forget-me-not (Myosotis alpestris); Wallflower (Cheiranthus cheiri). Others such as Foxglove and Hollyhock now have annual forms which home gardeners prefer since they flower the same year as sown outdoors.

Biennials only give abundant bloom when plentiful rootballs and bushy healthy plants are produced in the summer and fall of the previous year. The plants remain green all winter though not growing a great deal although roots are partially active whenever mild weather occurs for several consecutive days.

Just now in early September we are concerned about putting the plants out into the places where they are to flower next year. If you plan to clear a space for them later, and the young plants are still where they were sown, they must be planted now into a piece of really good ground until you have the final place ready.

A month's growth in your well-composted soil will amaze you.

In park nurseries you will usually find wallflowers, for instance, lined out in rows, giving each plant nine to 12 inches space. Later in September or even October depending on the season, when flower beds are cleared of summer annuals, these plants are lifted, each with its shovel-sized ball of roots and good soil, to be replanted in the display beds.

When transplanting in the home garden, see that the new soil and the root-balls are damp. Later, dryness must be prevented if rains do not occur or you will soon find the plants limp.

At the final planting, be particularly careful to firm the soil around the roots and the stems, for although a humusy soil makes a good plant, blooming will be poor if roots and stem are rocked by winter winds.

Wallflowers (and stocks) belong in the vast Cruciferae Family to which all the cabbage tribe belong, and share the dislike of the vegetables to a loose soil for making either heads or flowers.

All these plants need to be checked in winter after frosts or winds may have loosened them in the soil. Pressing them back gently but firmly will repair the damage if done promptly.

And no peat moss with any of these, if you would have healthy plants and a fine show of colorful and fragrant flowers next year.

THEREFORE, THERE IS NOW no condemnation for those who are in Christ Jesus, because through Christ Jesus the law of the Spirit of life set me free from the law of sin and death. New bridge spanning Cheewhat River at Clo-oose has single span measuring 150 feet

—Humphry Davy photos

Back to Solid Footing On West Coast Trail

By HUMPHRY DAVY
Times Staff

An attractive new bridge spanning the Cheewhat River at Clo-oose on the west coast trail between Port Renfrew and Bamfield has been completed by a federal parks crew.

Constructed of wood and supported by cables, the bridge has a single clear span of 150 feet.

It replaces an old bridge constructed by the Ministry of Transport in the 1950s when the trail was still maintained as a life-saving trail for shipwrecked mariners.

Parks Canada works manager John Watts, the man responsible for the trail restoration program, said in addition one mile of boardwalk and small bridges over boggy areas and creeks were installed in the Clo-oose Carmanah area this summer.

The west coast trail, designated to become part of Pacific Rim national Park, is being restored by Parks Canada for hikers and campers. The project was started in 1973 and since then more than half its length has been put back into shape.

When work on the trail first began, some hikers complained that the parks branch was making the trail too easy a walk for people. That was when summer weather was normal.

But there were no complaints this summer, according to Dick Cooper, foreman of six Indian trail builders.

"Heavy rainfalls during August turned sections of the trail not yet restored into quagmires," he explained. "Hikers were only too glad to walk on something solid."

The boardwalks also protect the terrain and are a necessity during the rainy season in winter.

Clo-oose, where the men are working, is an unspoiled beauty spot situated three miles south of the Nitinat Lake or about 20 miles west of Port Renfrew. It has a beach more than a mile long, the Cheewhat river and lake and large salt water marshes.

It was the site of an historic Indian village abandoned in the 1960s. Its people, members of the Nitinat tribe, were builders of some of the most seaworthy cedar canoes on the Pacific Northwest.

While no count was taken of the number of holidayers who used the trail this year, Watts said there seemed to be less Americans and more Vancouver Islanders.

Some U.S. groups came from the Atlantic seaboard, such as New York, he said. There were some Australians and New Zealanders.

"Despite the rain, family groups, young people and adults kept coming throughout the summer," he said.

Watts said work on the trail would terminate for this year on Sept. 17.

Meditation Seen Key to Ideal Society

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

Harry Sraseson, 29, is a precise and articulate former English professor who paused briefly in Victoria Thursday to suggest an ideal society is a real possibility in North America.

Utopia can come true because more and more people are pausing for a few moments twice a day to meditate — and so bring more order to their lives and what is more significant, the lives of those around them.

The evidence: In 22 U.S. cities where at least one per cent of the population is practising transcendental meditation, surveys show there is a decrease in social disorders, including crime, Staseson said.

He is the national director of the World Plan executive council in Ottawa, meaning he is the senior administrator for what's is better known as the TM movement in this country.

TM is the practical aspect of the movement founded and still led by Indian sage Maharishi Mahesh Yogi, which is active in more than 60 countries. Advocates estimate the number of people around the world practising TM is approaching one billion.

About 6,000 people have taken TM training at the Victoria centre over the past 14 years. Cost of the program for an adult is $115, with all funds devoted to expanding the movement.

Staseson spoke Thursday to a luncheon for business people active in the movement and explained later how the World Plan is passing through a transition and now has a new target.

For the past few years there has been emphasis on training teachers, both in numbers and quality, he said. That has now been achieved, with about 8,000 instructors in North America.

Now the Maharishi envisages creation of an ideal society and has chosen North America as the place because that is where the movement has shown its greatest growth.

It's hard to convince unbelievers that something like meditation could eventually produce world-wide harmony so the aim is to produce living proof by first creating an ideal society.

Staseson said the new campaign will be aimed at community leaders, will encourage people to strive for the ideal in their work, to believe perfect is possible.

And it will continue to make the means available, instruction in TM.

Among target areas for the campaign: health, government, education, law and order, science, the arts and communication systems.

One specific way will be by holding celebrations four times yearly, social affairs where the movement will pay tribute to people in the community who have done an outstanding job, he said.

Both TM advocates and the public will be invited and the first in Victoria is tentatively set for Sept. 24. Similar functions will be held in communities throughout the country.

Staseson said he learned about meditation from his father and found practising it produced a startling improvement in his college marks.

As an English professor in Saskatchewan, he mentioned it to his students and in a few months about 10 per cent of the college was meditating.

He said his students found so much more in TM than the subject he was teaching he felt he had to become involved in it full time.

Train Offers Vans To Its Commuters

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The Southern Pacific Railroad is offering its commuter passengers 1,000 free vans if they will quit taking the train.

The project would cost the railroad $6 million to get out of the commuter business.

The railroad, which claims it is losing $9 million a year on the commuter run between San Francisco and San Jose, handed out kits explaining its idea to the regular 8,000 commuters this week.

SP said it would buy up to 1,000 new eight-passenger vans and turn them over to the commuters. Each regular SP commuter would then become one-eighth owner of a van. The eight people who get a van would have to share fuel, maintenance and insurance expenses.

"Commuters using vanpools would pay less than they do now for rail fares and save even more in future years," explained SP vice president Alan Demoss. "They would also save both time and money because vanpools can provide door-to-door service."

California Public Utilities Commissioner Leonaed Ross called it "a very intriguing idea."

PANIC CHARGED ON VOLCANO

The News Services

PARIS — French volcanologist Haroun Tazieff said Thursday other scientists studying Guadeloupe's La Soufriere volcano were incompetent and that the evacuation of 72,000 islanders from the volcano's slopes was "simply a reaction of panic."

In an interview on the government television network FR3, Tazieff, 62, said French authorities had exerted "moral pressure" on him to keep him from speaking out He described reports from the French news agency Agence France-Presse as "a tissue of calumnies which I reject."

The Polish-born scientist said French authorities "feared I would say clearly what I thought about the situation."

Asked his opinion of numerous predictions that La Soufriere could erupt at any time with the force of several Hiroshima sized atomic bombs, Taxieff said, "I do not hesitate to call the people who made these predictions incompetent — these predictions were made by people who have never even seen an eruption."

The 4,900-foot mountain on the southwestern edge of Guadaloupe has been spewing clouds of steam and ash for weeks and hundreds of tremors have shaken its slopes during the past five days.

Tazieff, injured slightly when the summit of La Soufriere exploded Monday in a rain of dust and stones, said before leaving the island Wednesday that the eruption — forecast by various experts for the past two weeks — "will be spectacular, but probably not a catastrophe."

"The thing to fear is if something alarming — not dangerous — should happen," he said. "If there was a big earth tremor at night, people might panic and that would be much more dangerous than the volcano."

Penthouse Prostitute Picked Up Fast $20,000

Times News Services

VANCOUVER — A prostitute wearing a disguise testified Thursday that she made up to $20,000 in six months working from the Penthouse Cabaret.

She said she worked a six-day week, going out "to sell my body for money."

Her disguise was ordered removed after defence counsel Russ Chamberlain complained that his clients couldn't tell if the prostitute had been in their premises unless she revealed her identity.

Charged with conspiring to live off the avails of prostitution and public mischief with intent to corrupt public morals are:

Celebrity Enterprises Ltd., the alleged lessee of the Seymour Street club; Joe Philliponi, Ross Filippone, Domenick Filippone, Ross Filippone (all members of the same family but with different surnames), Jan Stedlac, and Minerva Kelly. Eleanor Harrigan and Tony Pizani are named as co-conspirators but not charged.

All of the accused, except Domenick (Mickey) who is in hospital with a leg infection, were invited into the courtroom with club employees and others named by the prostitute to see her take off her red, curly wig and saucer-type smoked glasses.

The unmasking apparently served its purpose. Several in attendance nodded their heads in recognition.

The girl had earliier, testified the Penthouse was headquarters for her and her husband in 1975 from February through July.

"The tricks paid in cash on the average of $60 each, and each time I returned to the club my husband would take all the money except for a few dollars with which to buy Seven-Up," she said.

She said she was never a "working girl" until she went to the Penthouse under threats from her husband that he would beat her up.

From a book of photographs she identified club waitresses, a janitor, Jan Stedlac ("the usual doorman"), Cindy the stripper and part-time prostitute, and a score of girls who just sat around, waiting for men to come along and "men who had several girls sitting around them."

She said there were several colored girls there every evening and they all sat along a bench facing tables in the lower gold room.

From the courtroom gallery she picked out Tony Pizani, and said that one night he set her up with a trick who paid $60 and she, in turn, paid Tony $5.

She picked out Carl, the Penthouse cook, who also introduced her to a friend seeking sex and asked for a cash favor when she returned.

"I told him he would have to see my husband."

Lawyers Sidestep BNA Flap

Canadian Press

WINNIPEG — The Canadian Bar Association deftly sidestepped a vote Thursday on a resolution that would have committed it to a position on patriation of the British North America Act and a controversial amending formula.

Delegates to the 1976 convention referred the resolution by Ron Bray of Vancouver for further study at the mid-winter meeting of the association. By then, Bray said, it should be a dead issue.

The BNA Act of 1867, Canada's constitution, still rests in Britain. The British parliament still has legal power to approve or reject laws passed in Canada but for decades British approval has been automatic.

Bray won little support for his contention that the association should take a position now because of Prime Ministers Trudau's warning that Parliament alone will patriate the constitution unless the provinces agree on an amending formula by next month.

His resolution called for patriation under the Victoria Conference amending formula of 1971, which would enable the federal government and a majority of provinces, weighted by region or population, to make changes.

Quebec, Alberta and British Columbia all have expressed opposition to this formula. A prairie lawyer said it would mean that Alberta's control of its oil and gas might be shifted to Ottawa without Alberta's consent. And Senator G. I. Smith, former Conservative premier of Nova Scotia, said all provinces probably have different views than they had in 1971.

Cabinet Road Show Announced

Premier Bill Bennett announced Thursday a fall series of out-of-town cabinet meetings to promote "cabinet involvement in communities around the province."

Seven cabinet meetings will be held in various communities between September and December.

The schedule includes Terrace, Sept. 23; Kelowna, Sept. 29; Prince George Oct. 7; Kamloops, Oct. 13; the annual cabinet meeting in Fort Langley, Nov. 19 to mark the anniversary of the 1858 appointment of the first governor of the colony of British Columbia; Cranbrook, Nov. 25 and Burnaby, Dec. 2.

Bennett said individual cabinet ministers will visit other B.C. communities.

At least portions of the out-of-town cabinet meetings will be open to the public for presentation of briefs or delegations to cabinet, he said.

Cape Town Battleground Sealed Off

Times News Services

CAPE TOWN — Police closed off this city's downtown core and warned whites to stay off the streets today as the mainly white shopping area again became a battle ground over South Africa's racial policies.

Unconfirmed reports said 5,000 youths were marching on Cape Town from outlying colored townships.

Today's clash in Cape Town came when police dispersed youths who were assembling at an open area on the edge of the city centre, just across from the main railway station.

The youths had been arriving by train and bus and seemed to be preparing to move into the city centre when police let loose a barrage of teargas canisters.

The choking gas spread over a three-block area and youths ran in all directions.

More riot squad vehicles stood by, ready to intercept the main body of marchers reported advancing on the city.

The rioting flashed from downtown Cape Town to black and colored townships at Langa. Hanover Park and Maitland, where police overnight uncovered caches of gasoline bombs.

George Abrey, a security official, said he saw at least 10 persons faint from the teargas fired into an underground shopping centre near Adderley Street and helped them up to the street level before passing out himself.

One bystander, Ansel Slome, suddenly found himself among a crowd of demonstrators at a downtown intersection when a squad of riot police in camouflage fatigues and wearing gas masks approached. He turned to run by was wounded and felled by a volley of buckshot fired by police.

Police said one colored person was killed by police gunfire at a high school, bringing to 297 the number killed in 10 weeks of nationwide anti-government rioting.

Police said they shot and killed two colored men in Thursday's violence in the townships, which followed the clashes here. Unofficial reports said a third man also died.

The South African Press Association news agency said one of the dead was a 10-year-old boy.

'Last Chance' Talks

By ROBIN WRIGHT
Washington Post

JOHANNESBURG — For South Africans, this weekend's talks between South African Prime Minister John Vorster and U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger represent the most crucial phase of international diplomacy in their history, for South Africans generally feel the negotiations will decide whether the growing dispute between black and white in southern Africa is to be settled peacefully or by further confrontations.

The talks have already become known here as the "eleventh hour negotiations," indicating the feeling in South Africa that this is the last chance to find peaceful solutions, with Western backing, to the rapidly escalating confrontations in Rhodesia, Namibia and South Africa.

Dramatic events in all three areas since the first Kissinger-Vorster meeting on June 23 in West Germany have heightened pressure for fast action. And the approaching American election has further fueled the fires under the usually slow-moving South African government, which

After a half-hour meeting Vander Zalm said Belknap had offered his resignation, "but I will not ask him for it."

Belknap was fined $250 earlier this week by Nanaimo juvenile court Judge Stanley Wardill who ruled that Belknap must pay the fine, and $50 in restitution, on behalf of a 13-year-old boy charged with several break-ins and the theft of a car.

Belknap, as superintendent of child welfare, is the legal guardian of about 9,500 B.C. juveniles who are wards of the state.

Vander Zalm said he would meet Attorney-General Garde Gardom when he returns from holidays next week and recommend that the government appeal the ruling on behalf of Belknap.

Vander Zalm said if the appeal is not successful, he will recommend to cabinet that the government pay the $300 fine and all court costs for Belknap, "and if the government won't pick it up, I'll pick it up myself.

"I'm sure the government will stand behind its civil servants 100 per cent," Vander Zalm said.

Belknap said he did not want to comment while the appeal was pending.

ZIPPER GOES HOME

Last month Zipper was lost, wandering down the highway outside Cache Creek, lately he's been staying in Victoria and Saturday he flies home to Kamloops.

Zipper is a handsome mostly Airdale dog who can thank two unidentified girls and a persistent staff at the Victoria SPCA shelter for finally getting him back home.

Kennel master Nelson Hickson detailed the story this way today: the women vacationing in the Interior came upon Zipper on the road outside Cache Creek, obviously lost.

Hickson wrote the SPCA office in Kamloops, the nearest one to Cache Creek, asking if there had been inquiries about a lost dog like Zipper.

Meanwhile he kept Zipper long after the time dogs are usually put up for adoption or destroyed.

Thursday he got a phone call from an elderly man, George Ferguson of Walhachin, a little community near Cache Creek, thrilled that his dog had not disappeared forever.

Profits Forcing Propane Controls

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Ottawa has indicated it will bring in price controls for propane, B.C. Energy Commission spokesman D. I. Johannessen said today.

He made the comment in releasing a commission report showing the price of propane had doubled in the past three years and 50 per cent of the increase was pure profit for producers and distributors.

Johannessen said the B.C. Energy Commission has held lengthy talks with officials of the federal department of energy, mines and natural resources and the Ottawa people have indicated they favor controls on propane to match those on oil and natural gas.

The report urged a reduction in provincial taxes on propane and the beginning of a two-price system.

Davis said he would refer the question of a tax cut to the provincial cabinet but no action could be taken before the budget in the spring. The commission recommended replacing the 7 per cent sales tax with a flat rate of half a cent per gallon, the same as for heating oils.

"As for price controls, we believe that this is really a federal matter," Davis said.

Johannessen said the commission would like Ottawa to set a ceiling price for propane in B.C. based upon the Edmonton price plus freight charges. A higher price could be established for export but producers would have to guar-

Jobless Jump For U.S.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — United States unemployment edged up slightly in August to 7.9 per cent, its highest level since last December, when it was 8.2 per cent.

The latest statistics cast some doubt on earlier predictions that unemployment will drop below 7 per cent by the end of the year.

Meanwhile, wholesale prices, an indicator of prices consumers eventually pay, fell 0.1 per cent in the U.S. last month, mainly because of a steep 2.9 per cent decline in food prices.

Big-Time Two-Bit Thief

MONTREAL (CP) — A former toll-gate employee on an autoroute north of Montreal pleaded guilty in session court Thursday to the theft of $105,486 in 25-cent tolls.

Samuel Desjardins, 45, who had collected tolls for 13 years, said he took the money home in bleach jars during a nine-month period in 1975.

The woman he lived with pleaded guilty as an accomplice.

Lock-Out Certain

VANCOUVER (CP) — Only an eleventh-hour solution to a dispute over a 10-minute walk to a hot lunch can prevent the B.C. construction industry from staging its second shutdown of the summer today.

A fight between the Construction Labor Relations Association and the striking plumbers' union over paid downtown parking has been resolved but late Thursday the lunch issue stood in the way of industrial peace.

Union plumbers who have been striking for more than two weeks over the issue were joined Thursday by members of the boilermaker's union.

Chuck McVeigh, association president, said the association was willing to abandon lock-out plans but the plumbers must return to work first.

Electrical Firms Fixed Prices

TORONTO (CP) — Three major Canadian lighting firms have been convicted of conspiring to lessen competion between 1959 and 1967.

Mr. Justice Lawrence Pennell of Ontario Supreme Court, in a 99-page judgment released Thursday, found Canadian General Electric Co. Ltd., Westinghouse Canada Ltd. and GTE Sylvania Canada Ltd. guilty of controlling and dominating the lighting markets.

He acquitted the three firms of two charges of forming a combine or monopoly.

Sentencing has been postponed until the nine lawyers involved have a chance to read the judgment.

Mr. Justice Pennell said that in a field where only a few firms dominate the manufacture and distribution of similar items, "it may well be that price competition is the only real competition that is in any way beneficial to the public."

But the judge found that the firms "closely co-ordinated their actions and marched in lock step to create a working unit in control of the industry."

Prior to General Electric's introduction of a national sales plan in 1959, the three firms had gone through a period of intense price-cutting competition which had affected profits adversely, he said.

Quebec Facing Hydro Lawsuit

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Newfoundland will begin legal action against Quebec later this month in an attempt to obtain 800 megawatts of power from the Churchill Falls hydroelecric station in Labrador, Energy Minister John Crosbie said today.

Crosbie said a reply had been received from Churchill Falls Labrador Corp. to a demand by Newfoundland that the power be supplied.

She Took on GM—and Won

VANCOUVER (CP) — After trading in one lemon for another, a West Vancouver high school teacher took General Motors and one of its dealers to court and won Thursday.

Judge Wally Graig ruled in small claims court that Jean Cox was entitled to reimbursement from General Motors and Bowell McLean Ltd. for costs incurred when the engine block in her car had to be replaced at a cost of $849.36.

Mrs. Cox testified she needed a reliable car to commute 38 miles to and from work in North Delta each day.

So in 1973 she traded in Detroit's all-time super-lemon, a Firenza, for a car recommended to her by Bowell McLean — a brand new Pontiac Astre.

Despite keeping it fully serviced, the car started requiring excessive amounts of oil after it had done 36,000 miles.

She took it to Neil Richmond, a North Vancouver engine specialist, who advised her of extensive wear in one of the cylinders and said this was symptomatic of an overheating problem that General Motors had acknowledged with its Astres by extending the warranty.

Mrs. Cox said she then contacted Bowell McLean only to be informed there was nothing the firm could do under warranty.

Richmond replaced the engine block for her. He said in court Thursday that anything less would have been a "Mickey Mouse job".

Judge Craig ruled that Mrs. Cox was entitled to reimbursement because General Motors and Bowell McLean knew of the general defect and there was an implied warranty by the dealer that the car would be reliable.

FALL FAIR FUN AT SAANICH

Saanich Fall Fair manager Henry Robinson promises a variety of events that will keep visitors entertained for all three days of the 108th annual fair.

The fair runs Saturday, Sunday and Monday. Gates open at 8 a.m. each day at the Saanichton Fairgrounds, on East Saanich Road just north of Mount Newton Crossroad.

Cost is $1.50 for adults, 75 cents for teens and senior citizens and free to children under 12. Adults may purchase a three-day pass for $3.

Saturday's highlights include highland dancing, beef cattle judging and many of the 4-H events. There will also be folk dancing in costume Saturday afternoon.

Sunday is the day for farm games — including fancy dressed cows and goats.

Monday's events include the judging of dairy cattle and sheep; more 4-H events and a livestock parade, cow-milking contest, a goat-tying contest and calf races.

The auction sale of beef and lambs begins at 4:45 p.m. Monday. And at 6:30 p.m. there will be country gospel singing in the bandshell.

A number of events occur throughout the three-day fair. An orchestra will play Saturday night and Monday afternoon.

Every day there will be demonstrations of old-time farm machinery — one of the few places where these old machines can still be seen in action.

Robinson said all concessions on the fairgrounds are run by local, non-profit organizations.

Gloomy Weekend Outlook

Expect rain this long Labor Day weekend.

So what else is new this summer? But at least, says the Victoria weatherman, we'll likely have less rain here than the rest of the Island.

The five-day outlook calls for clouds here and intermittent showers. It will also be cool.

Wash. State Ferry Crews Hit the Bricks

Washington State Ferry runs between Sidney and Anacortes were shut down at midnight Thursday when fleet officers walked off the job without warning.

B.C. Ferries and Black Ball sailings will have to absorb the extra traffic on Labor Day weekend. . . . the busiest time of the year. But officials don't expect too much trouble.

"It will probably affect our noon run out of Sidney, but we should be able to absorb the extra cars assembled," a B.C. Ferries spokesman said today.

The Washington State ferry makes two trips a day and has been carrying full loads of 160 cars and several hundred passengers each trip since ferry fare increases on B.C. Ferries.

There are three ferries tied up at Anacortes and one in Friday Harbor after the walkout by members of the Masters', Mates' and Pilots' Union.

"There's no way I can predict how long it will last," Capt. David Bowle, branch agent for the union said today.

He said the walkout was a spontaneous action by the membership, and is fully supported by the union. "The next movie is up to the State of Washington," he added.

Boyle said agreement had been reached on a new contract after three months of negotiation.

Management and the union were in "complete agreement on the non-cost items and wages were being negotiated and were not an issue."

"But the agreement was sent to the state attorney-general's department and the contract language was changed to the extent they completely reneged on what we had negotiated," said Boyle.

Ferry system spokesman Lee Kramer said one ferry in the fleet made an emergency run this morning with a 53-year-old woman heart attack victim, but no regular runs are planned.

Two areas — Vashon, west of Seattle, and the San Juan Islands, southwest of Bellingham, are the only areas which would be isolated by a ferry strike. Other destinations can be reached by land.

UNUSUAL CONTOURS of the roll-on, roll-off carrier Dilkara intrigued shorewatchers today as she steamed into Esquimalt Harbor and entered Esquimalt Graving Dock for refit. She and her two sister ships of the Pacific Australia Direct line, Allunga and Paralla visit Victoria regularly for refits.

Free Ferries For Seniors

Senior citizens can ride B.C. Ferries free today and Saturday so they can attend Senior Citizens' Day at the Pacific National Exhibition in Vancouver.

Transport Minister Jack Davis said the special arrangement does not apply to seniors travelling Sunday or Monday and they must show a Pharmacare card and be a B.C. resident.

Seniors must pay for their car or bus fare.

Since the ferry fare increase, senior citizens have been able to travel free Monday through Thursday, except when the Monday is at the end of a long weekend.

Under new burial rates for Ross Bay cemetery, approved this week by the city parks committee, why should it cost more to be buried on a Saturday?

A puzzled Ald. Bill Tindall wanted to know why it's going to cost an extra $50 for a six-foot-deep burial on a Saturday morning, and an additional $75 for afternoon interment. That's on top of the basic charge, which has gone up from $105 to $121.

The answer is labor costs, explained parks superintendent Al Smith: Saturday mornings the staff are on time-and-a-half, afternoons on double time.

So it all depends on what you urn . . .

Dr. Eileen Levis, a graduate of Mount Douglas High School, is the only doctor in Warner, New Hampshire, where the population climbs to about 1,200 in the summer months. Her brother William is a doctor in Victoria.

The female Dr. Levis thinks young doctors miss a lot of medicine if they don't experience something like a country practice before specializing. It teaches them to listen to patients.

"You know, some of these specialists are truly great mechanics," she says in the Globe article. "But they don't listen. And that's as much of the job as medicine itself."

The booth is an innovative idea of local Liberals. Go to the fair and you'll come upon a booth with cartoon drawings of Prime Minister Trudeau, provincial Liberal leader Gordon Gibson and Liberal defectors Pat McGeer and Jack Davis, now members of the Socred cabinet.

There will be large openings for the mouths of this quartet and beanbags to hurl free at the target of your choice. Overhead, a sign will read: "fermez his bouche."

Frances Elford, regional vice-president for the Liberals, says a score will be kept on who proves the most popular target.

At some point in the 24-year history of Jerry Gosley's Smile Show, someone certainly sang one of Second World War's most popular songs, The White Cliffs of Dover. Now it seems the famous white cliffs, mostly privately owned, are in danger of commercial development and Jerry has been invited to help save them from such desecration.

A benefit performance will be held in Los Angeles, Nov. 5, which, with tickets priced at $150 and $100 will hopefully raise $50,000 toward preserving the cliffs for posterity. Hollywood actress Anna Lee, who visited the Smile Show recently, has invited Gosley and impersonator Steve Ivings to join the starry cast of the benefit which includes Mel Torme, Irene Dunne, Julie Andrews, Anthony Newley and others.

Gosley says that the Smile Show Society board is also setting up a nation-wide campaign for contributions to the fund and that each donor will receive a souvenir certificate.

Goodwill Enterprises community relations man Alec Reid believes in service, but last week he outdid himself.

It started with a call from an elderly woman who said she had been searching for an obscurde children's book entitled Alone in London. Could Reid help?

"There's always a chance," he said not wanting to say the probability of finding a copy was almost nil. The next day he was putting out books for the Goodwill book sale and one of the first he touched was . . . you guessed it, Alone in London.

Instant-on television sets take an undeserved drubbing as an alleged cause of house fires, says Irwin Shea, an electronics technician for 30 years.

"There is absolutely no danger in them," Shea said. "They are no more dangerous than your transistor radio."

Perhaps 10 years ago, when vacuum tubes were used, there was some hazard due to overheating as the electrical current stayed on to keep the set warm between viewings.

But since transistorization, only a minor voltage is required to keep the picture tube slightly warm, about the same as a doorbell, Shea said. And in the past year sets have been made to do away entirely with a maintenance voltage.

The biggest TV danger is turning a set on, then going away and forgetting it, especially if there is a runner or table cloth to impede air circulation, Shea advised. . .

The climate of Victoria is like the Mediterranean only a bit cooler, says the 1976 Guide to Greater Victoria, which is just off the presses.

As for the summers, they are pleasant and dry, it says.

The guide, published annually by the Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce, also has a revealing article on the founding of the southern portion of the island.

When Captain Cook came to this area in 1777, the Indians were calling Victoria Camosack or Camosun, which by translation means "the place of rushing waters."

The name still fits.

They'll Fight For Farmland

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

A spokesman for Royal Oak residents said today if the B.C. Land Commission allows the Capital Region Board to add 70 acres to the industrial park in their area they "will be a bunch of hypocrits."

The board is expected Wednesday to approve a request from Saanich to change its official regional plan so the municipality can expand the industrial park to 120 acres.

The commission must approve removing the land from the agricultural land reserve.

Lawrence Cook, who heads the Royal Oak Concerned Citizens, said his group had received a letter from the land commission saying it wouldn't consider rezoning unless it is proven the land is not productive.

"That land has been graded No. 2, which is highly productive," Cook said, "If they (the commission) go ahead and pass this, they will be a bunch of hypocrits."

Cook said most of the land in the proposed park is owned by speculators waiting to make a financial bonanza.

"When they bought the land it sold for anywhere from 50 cents to $3.50 a foot. If it's zoned for industrial park it will sell for $8.50 to $10 a foot. There's between $20 million and $30 million profits to be made," Cook said.

He added there was no assurance that once given the extra 70 acres, Saanich council would be satisfied.

"It's the same old promises you get from politicians. First they go for 70 acres, then another 50, eventually every spare area on the peninsula will be in it," he said.

The ROCC has circulated more than 1,500 questionnaires to area residents. When all of these are in a public meeting will be called to debate the issue.

"We will put Mayor Ed Lum on the hot seat and let him tell the people personally, instead of through the papers," Cook said.

He said early indications of the survey are that residents "are totally opposed to this light industrial project".

3,000 New Voters

At least 3,000 new voters had been registered in the four core municipalities when registration lists officially closed earlier this week.

But municipal clerks stressed today that their figures are still approximate because there has not been enough time for data processing to weed out transfers, duplications and other deletions.

Ballparks figures for additional voters registered in three of the four municipalities were: Victoria, 1,300; Oak Bay, 545; Esquimalt, 200.

Saanich municipal clerk Gordon Hayward said he was unable to provide even an approximate total.

However, with a population slightly larger than the city's Saanich could be expected to have signed up at least 1,000 new voters.

Mayor Mike Young said today the city has no intention of appealing a B.C. Supreme Court ruling Wednesday, which gave community associations the right to obtain bulk supplies of voters registration forms from City Hall.

"We are only concerned about the casualness of the registration procedure," he said. "It is all so casual and there are so many loose aspects to the act."

Summer Water Rules Lifted

Water restrictions imposed since June 1 were lifted in Central Saanich Thursday.

But in Sidney the summer restrictions are still in force. A spokesman for the water board said they would probably be lifted in a week or so.

Spree Worth Five Months

Mark David Stadnyk, 18, of 2537 Government, had pleaded guilty earlier to dangerous use of a shotgun, possession of a firearm dangerous to the public peace and possession of an imitation weapon for a purpose dangerous to the public peace.

The five-month jail term and 18-month probation covered two earlier charges of possession of marijuana.

Stadnyk had pleaded guilty ot the narcotics charges Aug. 19 and the court was awaiting a pre-sentencing report when the shooting incident occurred.

Several shots were fired Aug. 27, but nobody was injured. In a dramatic 20-minute confrontation, Victoria police sergeant Doug Sleivert removed his own weapon to gain the young man's confidence, and finally persuaded him to lay down the shotgun.

Judge William Ostler praised Sleivert's "cool conduct" in preventing a serious incident, and called him a "very courageous police officer."

Ostler recommended Stadnyk serve the five-months in a forestry camp, and placed a condition on probation that he stay away from drugs and firearms.

The pre-sentence report indicated he had been a heavy user of marijuana since he was 14 using up to one ounce of the drug every two days.

The marijuana charges stemmed from an incident July 13, when Stadnyk was arrested in his apartment — the scene of the later shooting.

$500,000 PUB

The Prairie Inn at 7806 East Saanich Road in Central Saanich, which became B.C.'s first neighborhood pub on Boxing Day 1974, is up for sale at $500,000.

A spokesman said today the inn is being sold because three of the partners plan to start two other businesses.

"With the inn that would be too much," he said.

Two unnamed partners have joined Gavin and Beth Harper, who owned the inn when it became a pub.

Built by Saanich pioneer Henry Simpson in 1893, the inn is the second to be built on the site, Simpson having built a small building there in 1959.

Simpson purchased the 300-acre site for less than 84 pounds sterling.

Impresario Business Sold

Theatrical impresario John Minshall has sold has Victoria company John Minshall Ltd. to Allen Houghton, it was announced Thursday.

Minshall said he sold his business for personal reasons, but he will continue to operate in the field for several more months.

The company has been responsible for booking major touring entertainment programs into the city.

Houghton has had a close association with the arts, first as administrator of Victoria Art Gallery and for the last two years as director of operations for Bastion Theatre.

He said he plans to work with established cultural organizations in addition to bringing in national and international artists. As a member of the interim committee of the B.C. Touring Arts Presenters, he intends to assist in organizing and promoting touring art attractions through B.C.

Minshall brought a number of notable international attractions to the city, including the Martha Graham Dance Company. But his crowning achievement of three years as the city's first full-time resident impresario was his collaboration with Kaleidoscope Theatre in the musical, Cabaret, which ends its two-month run tonight at the Empress Hotel.

Missing Inmate Mystifies Officials

And, while police mount a search for him, prison officials are wondering why he skipped.

Older than most at 56, his demeanor in prison, at least, belied the fact he had a criminal record stretching back 39 years.

William Head director John Mulroney, in an interview today, referred to him as a "model inmate," always helpful, always cheerful . . . the last man anyone would expect to run away.

So much trust had been given him that since last December he has received 70 day passes — 35 of them to attend an in-service program at Saanich's Glendale Lodge for special problem children.

Al, as the kids called him, developed a strong rapport with his young charges and everyone was pleased with his progress.

As far as Glendale staff were concerned there were few inmates more understanding, patient, or imaginative.

"It's probably hackneyed to say it but I think he was devoted to our residents," says Archie Morrison supervisor of social services.

Babcock arrived Wednesday morning with a group of about 10 inmates. He spent the morning with the children, then went to lunch. At 1:30 p.m. he was expected to return but never showed up.

The William Head bus left at 5:30 p.m. without him. An hour later he was officially reported unlawfully at large. Now a Canada-wide warrant has been issued for his arrest.

Mulroney is unable to explain Babcock's sudden departure.

"Why does anyone leave? It's terribly disappointing. He's let himself down again . . . and the rest of us too. His action may jeopardise the Glendale program, which I consider one of the best we have."

Morrison said Babcock had told him a week ago he was concerned about having to leave the program because there was talk he might be moved to another area — a forest camp on the mainland where he could use skills as a heavy duty mechanic.

"He didn't want to go," said Morrison. "But there was no indication he was depressed."

New York

Brokers noted no special news to account for the market's slight upward tendency.

They said a few traders might be buying in hopes of a market revival after the Labor Day weekend, which traditionally marks the "business New Year."

In the economic news, the U.S. government reported that the unemployment rate rose from 7.8 to 7.9 per cent in August for its third straight monthly increase.

And New York's Citibank kept its prime lending rate at seven per cent. There had been some faint hopes that the bank would reduce the key rate on blue chip loans.

Central and South West, the most active NYSE issue, was unchanged at $16.

Among glamors, IBM rose 1⅝ to $278; Digital Equipment added 1⅞ to 165¼, and Philip Morris was ahead ⅝ to $58.

Refinancing Prepared For Nfld. Refinery

ST. JOHN'S (UPI) — A refinancing plan providing some $615 million to reopen and expand the Come-By-Chance oil refinery complex controlled by New York businessman John Shaheen is nearing completion, according to oil sources.

The plan, which also provides financial backing for the construction of a petrochemical plant adjoining the refinery, is expected to be announced by the end of the year. It could come shortly.

Former Newfoundland premier Joseph Smallwood, who was instrumental in the establishment of the refinery, told UPI he expects the refinancing arrangement will be "signed, sealed and delivered by Christmas."

Platt's Oilgram, an oil industry trade publication, reported last week the refinancing, which it said totalled $617 million, would be announced shortly. The plan will be financed by a group of European banks, Platt's said.

The Come-By-Chance refinery opened in 1973 but was plagued by production and financial troubles which led to its shutdown earlier this year. Major creditors moved in late February to force the refinery into receivership despite attempts by Shaheen to block the action.

Shaheen has a variety of business interests, including announced plans to publish a new afternoon newspaper in New York City.

A spokesman for Natural Resources Co. said the company had no comment on the reported financing plans.

Smallwood, premier from 1949 to 1972, said he expected Shaheen, after financing arrangements are completed, to rebuild a defective hydrogen unit at the refinery which had been a major cause of the production problems.

"That will cost between $20 and $40 million and it will take a few months to do but it (the refinery) will be in full production by midwinter," Smallwood said, adding that construction of the petrochemical plant then would begin.

Smallwood estimated the cost of paying off the refinery debts, making the repairs and building the new plant would be $615 million.

"I have enormous confidence in him," Smallwood said of Shaheen.

"We meet fairly often and we talk from time to time and I'm quite certain he will carry out his plans."

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO (AP) — Soybean futures bulled ahead more than 10 cents a bushel in the final minutes on the Chicago Board of Trade today and influenced a rally in most other commodities on the exchange.

Corn futures were up as much as 3 cents a bushel and declines in wheat and oats were sharply trimmed. Soybean meal advanced $4 a ton. Soybean oil, down about ½ cent a pound early, closed about ¼ lower.

All commodities were lower early in the trade under profit-taking by recent longs and rather active commercial selling. Prices then moved in narrow ranges in all of the pits as the pace slowed down into a normal pre-holiday pattern. Late in the session, however, the routine changed.

At the close, soybeans were 7¾ to 10½ cents a bushel higher, September 7.10; corn was ½ lower to 3 higher, September 2.90½; oats were 1¾ lower to ½ higher, September 1.68 and wheat was 1 to 2¼, lower, September 3.19.

ABC PRESENTS 6-PART NOVEL FOR CHILDREN

The ABC Owned Television Stations will present a six-part novel for television, Little Vic, produced by the Emmy Award-winning Daniel Wilson Productions as part of the Division's children's programming effort for the 1976-77 season, it was announced by Phil Boyer, vice president, programming, ABC owned television stations.

In making the announcement, Mr. Boyer said the adult form novel for television proved highly successful on the ABC Television Network this past year, adding, "Danny Wilson is recognized in the industry as one of the most sensitive and talented producers of children's programming. I'm certain that his translation of a children's story to this popular new mini-series form will be done with the same care and expertise as his past award-winning projects."

Little Vic is about the 15-year-old orphaned son of a jockey and his horse, Little Vic, and how, against all odds, they finally make it to the winner's circle. The story is based on a book of the same title, written by Doris Gates.

The ABC-Owned Television Stations' children's programming, under the umbrella title of Wide World of Adventure, will also include a new series of 18 documentaries produced by Alan Sloan of Avatar, Inc., in association with the Encyclopedia Britannica Educational Corporation and 20th Century-Fox, as well as specials locally produced by each of the five ABC-Owned Television Stations and shared by the other markets. More than $80,000, with a winner's share in excess of $40,000, promises top horseracing excitement in CTV's live coverage of The Prince of Wales Stakes, the second event in Canada's Triple Crown of racing, broadcasting Saturday, Sept. 4, at 1:30 p.m. on Channel 8.

Host Fergie Olver, co-host Jim Coleman and Daryl Wells, Canada's voice of horse racing, will be on hand to bring viewers a thrilling look at thoroughbred racing at its best from Fort Erie.

The youngest of the Triple Crown events, The Prince of Wales Stakes celebrates its 41st running this year and is a one-and-three-eighths-mile turf course.

They Get Free Tickets To See Stars at Work

By LEE MARGULIES

LOS ANGELES (AP) — They get free tickets to see television stars at work. Before the show starts they're entertained by a warm-up host, and sometimes a band, too. They may get free transportation to and from the event. A few may even leave with expensive gifts.

Who? Virtually anyone; and just for attending the filming or taping of a TV program here in the television production capital.

"One might think it's the easiest thing in the world, that if you're putting on a TV show people are automatically going to come. Not so," says Joseph Di Sante, who is in charge of filling the bleachers for ABC programs.

The task can be so demanding that all three major networks, plus other production facilities around town, have people employed full-time to handle it. And there is still enough work left over to keep a couple of independents in business.

If that's hard to believe, you have to remember that audiences are needed for every episode of more than 20 situation comedies, a handful of variety shows, countless game shows and talk shows and a never-ending stream of specials. They also are required for many pilot projects that never get on the air.

ABC, CBS and NBC estimate that a combined total of more than 2.5 million persons will sit in studio audiences for network shows this year.

Producers put a high premium on filling the studio auditoriums, which generally range in size from 200 to 500 seats. They say a full house benefits the performers in a variety show or comedy, the celebrities and contestants in a game show, and even the audience itself.

"It's like a party," says Ed Weinberger, a writer-producer involved with "The Mary Tyler Moore Show," "Phyllis" and "Doc."

"If you're at a party and the room is half empty, you say, 'Why am I at this dog of a party.' But if people are pouring out the doors and windows, you say, 'What a great party this is. Look who else is here!'"

ABC Sports Airs Final Golf Round

ABC Sports will present live, exclusive coverage of the final round of the — U.S. Men's Amateur Golf Championship at the Bel-Air Country Club, Los Angeles, on Sunday, Sept. 5 at 2:30 p.m. on Channel 4.

With ABC Sportscaster Chris Schenkel anchoring the broadcast and Dave Marr and Bob Rosburg providing the expert commentary, ABC Sports will be focusing its attention on the two finalists in the match play competition as they move through the final nine holes of the 6,507-yard Bel-Air course, vying for the coveted Amateur title won last year by Fred Ridley.

It should be an exciting windup to the event that has been won in past years by such great golfers as Bobby Jones, Arnold Palmer, Jack Nicklaus and 1976 U.S. Open winner Jerry Pate. It begins with a field of 200 and eventually develops into a two-man, 36-hole contest on the closing day.

The starting field includes defending champion Ridley, two-time British Amateur titlist Dick Siderowf of Westport, Conn., and former U.S. Amateur winners Gary Cowan of Kitchener, Ontario (1966 and 1971), and Marvin Giles III of Richmond, Virginia (1972).

Prince Charles Back In Popular Program

The Family Prince — CBC-TV's one-hour special with HRH Prince Charles discussing the monarchy — is to be repeated on the English-language network Sunday, Sept. 5 at 10 p.m.

When it was telecast earlier this year, more than 2,000,000 Canadians saw the program. Phone calls and letters to An editorial the Toronto Sun said, "It is a program that all Canadians should see . . . By the end of the hour the viewer has a new insight into the monarchy's symbolism as it affects us all, and more particularly a better understanding of what the Commonwealth 'family' is all about."

Produced and directed by Jeannine Locke, The Family Prince includes film footage illustrating the modern history of the monarchy and the evolution of the Commonwealth. Prince Charles (filmed for this program during a 1975 visit to Canada) is seen at Government House Ottawa talking informally about the monarchy today and his own role as future head of the Commonwealth.

The Family Prince was written by Barbara Moon and is narrated by Vincent Tovell.

Scandal Returns

Wenching, wining, fortune-hunting, and gossiping are required courses in "The School for Scandal," Richard Sheridan's rollicking comment on 18th century London society which convenes on Theatre in America, Wednesday, Sept. 8 at 9 p.m. (rebroadcast Saturday, Sept. 11 at 3 p.m.).

GEORGE CLUTESI will be featured during a two-hour program, Vancouver, Sunday, Sept. 5 at 7 p.m. on CKVU, Cable 13. Clutesi is a well known Canadian artist and author living in Port Alberni. The show will have excerpts of Clutesi's acting role in the internationally-famous movie, I Heard the Owl Call My Name, filmed in B.C. by director Daryl Duke.

MARTIN JARVIS, left, Vivien Heilbron and Robin Ellis star in The Moonstone, Masterpiece Theatre's five-part dramatization of Wilkie Collins' 19th century mystery story, beginning Sunday, Sept. 5 at 9 p.m. The series generally will be seen Sundays at 9 p.m. with rebroadcasts Sept. 10, Friday at 9 p.m. Set in Victorian England, The Moonstone is the suspense-filled story of a fabulous diamond looted from a temple in India, and the misfortunes it brings to those associated with it — especially the young and beautiful heroine, Rachel Verinder.

Jerry Lewis Telethon Stars Top Performers

Last-minute preparations are underway throughout southern B.C. in readiness for local response to the 1976 Jerry Lewis Labour Day Telethon. Originating live in Las Vegas, and led by Jerry Lewis and anchorman Ed McMahon, this continent-wide broadcast will kick off at 7 p.m. Sunday, Sept. 5, and will continue uninterrupted until 4 p.m. on Labor Day.

The broadcast will be seen on KSTW — Channel 11 — Tacoma, available both direct and on cablevision to a large audience in the Lower Mainland area and on southern Vancouver Island.

More than $800,000 was raised across Canada during the 1975 Telethon, and all those funds stayed in Canada for research leading to a cure for muscular dystrophy — a campaign led by Lewis since 1950.

Among the performers in the telecast from Del Webb's Hotel Saharah in Las Vegas are: Anna Marie Alberghetti, Tony Bennett, Carol Burnett, Vikki Carr, Cyd Charisse, Bobbie Gentry, Marvin Hamlisch, Julie Harris, David Hartman, Joey Heatherton, Florence Henderson, Charlton Heston, Julius LaRosa, The Lettermen, Trini Lopez, Barbara McNair, Manhattan Transfer, Tony Martin, Anne Meara, Mary Tyler Moore, The New Zoo Revue, O. C. Smith, Donny and Marie Osmond, Estelle Parsons, Gregory Peck, Debbie Reynolds, Frank Sinatra, Soul Train Dancers, Sally Struthers, and Tammy Wynette.

There will be four musical numbers originating in New York and will include scenes from My Fair Lady, Chicago, Guys and Dolls, and Bubbling Brown Sugar. These full-scale production numbers were all great Broadway hits.

VANCOUVER ACTRESS Pia Shandel, who has "paid her dues" on stage and in films for the past 10 years, won over scores of other applicants for the spot as a co-host of CKVU-TV's flagship prime-time evening show Vancouver, which debuts Sept. 5 on Cable 13. Miss Shandel, 28, a native of Copenhagen, raised and educated on the North Shore, joins male counterparts Mike Winlaw, Arden Ostrander, Clem Chapple and Allan Fortheringham, at 7 p.m.-9 p.m.

Bell Show Back on 5

NEW YORK (UPI) — The telephone is celebrating its 100th birthday again on television, and Don Ameche is acting as "advance man" for the show.

The star-studded 90-minute show, Jubilee, did so well last March 26 on its first run that the Bell company plans to repeat the performance on NBC Sept. 8, at 8 p.m. on Channel 5.

ANSWER ON PAGE NINE

Marian McPartland with Wilder

WILDER SHY MAN

Alec Wilder, composer for artists such as Frank Sinatra, Sarah Vaughan and Tony Bennett, is a shy man.

The promise that he could talk about anything he wanted was not enough to get him into the television studios. The promise that two of his best friends, jazz pianist Marian McPartland and jazz observer Tom Hampson, would be there, was.

The resulting program, Such Good Companions, Wednesday, Sept. 8 at 11 p.m. on Public TV 9, is an intimate portrait of the reclusive, nomadic Wilder.

Channel 9 Features Labor Day Musical

'America, a 60-minute musical documentary hosted by Glenn Ford and featuring seven top-rated singers, will be presented on Public TV 9 Monday, Sept. 6 at 10 p.m. as a Labor Day Special.

The program features Connie Stevens, Lou Rawls, John Hartford, Mac Davis, Mark Lindsay, Bill Medley and Gary Puckett. Musical selections include, Miss America sung by Mark Lindsay; Dead End Street, by Lou Rawls; Abraham, Martin John, by Bioll Medley; Home, by Mac Davis; John Hartford's Gentle on My Mind; If We Only Have Love, by Gary Puckett and Where Have All the Flowers Gone, by Connie Stevens. In addition, the America dance troup and chorus creates a cross-country ballet to Freedom Train with a panorama of the country forming a natural backdrop.

Ford, a veteran stage, movie and television performer, narrates the documentary produced on location throughout the U.S. His comments and the musical numbers are interlaced in each location to describe the nation's birth, growth and current conditions.

A 47-man crew and tons of equipment traveled 8,000 miles across the country in 23 days to accumulate some 15½ solid videotaped hours. The result is a 60-minute montage of America — its sights, songs and the candid feelings of its people.

Canada AM In Halifax

Canada AM, CTV's early-morning series visits the province of Nova Scotia September 6 through 10. The special week of programming is the first in a number of on-location broadcasts planned for the new season, in which Canada's only daily morning news and information show will move outside Toronto.

Many faces of Stanley Baxter

See Baxter 'Early'

To avoid utter confusion, viewers urgently are requested to tune in at the very start of The Stanley Baxter Big Picture Show, airing Monday, Sept. 6 at 9 p.m. on Public TV 9. A delay of even a few minutes might be very unsettling, since there's no way that a viewer-come-lately could discover that all the leading players are really one man — Stanley Baxter.

This special, presented on the entertainment omnibus Piccadilly Circus, gives U.S. audiences a chance to see the mimic that has overwhelmed England. He has been described as a smorgasbord of the funniest American comedians, with the zany humor of a Mel Brooks, the humorous literate quality of a Woody Allen, the mimicry talents of a Rich Little, and a bit of the Marx brother thrown in for flavor.

Faith Hubley and her daughter Georgia

Film-makers Taped Voices Of Children Since Infancy

The voices of their children, whom the Hubleys have taped since infancy, can be heard in the latest animated film by the award-winning pair, called Everybody Rides the Carousel. The 90-minute movie is scheduled to be shown on Channels 7 and 12 at 8 p.m. Friday, Sept. 10.

Carousel is adapted from the works of the psychoanalyst Erik H. Erikson and visualizes, in a film that is moving and funny by turns, the "psychosocial crises" that take place within each of us as we pass through the eight stages of life.

Mrs. Hubley, interviewed in a summer cottage on Cape Cod with her daughter, Georgia, now 16, said eight years went by before the Hubleys convinced Erikson that they could put his theme on film. If anyone could do it, it is this couple: They teach The Visualization of Abstract Themes at Yale to a class consisting of psychologists, child development experts, painters and artists.

The film shows that every life is a struggle, fought in the human arena, with eight chances to bring into balance the conflicting forces within every human being. It begins with the force of trust, represented by a kitten, battling with a hedgehog-like creature, representing mistrust, in each newborn baby.

CBS Plans Well Ahead

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The new television season hasn't started, and already the networks are planning pilot films to replace the series that falter.

Paramount Television has been commissioned by CBS to produce Under One Roof, a half-hour comedy pilot starring Maureen Stapleton.

ANSWERS ON PAGE NINE

Pat Barclay

Like most parents I often wonder about the quality of the education my children are receiving under the Canadian school system. Who are these people, their teachers, into whose hands I place them for a third of their waking lives? Have the many changes in curriculum since my own schooldays really been improvements? And (not to put too fine a point on it) are my children getting a genuine education or are my tax dollars supporting what amounts to a state-run babysitting service?

Sometimes it really does seem as if the chief end of Canadian schooling is to produce an 18-year old with a high school diploma in his hand and it-matters-not-what in his head. Yet the true end of education should be "not mere reading, writing, and counting, but an unending process of leading men and women to a fullness in their individual lives wherein self-knowledge will include moral and emotional as well as intellectual development."

These are the words of Maurice Elliott, who is one of five contributors to an illuminating series of essays collected by Joseph Gold in a new book titled In the Name of Language! Like his fellow contributors, Elliott is a teacher of English and a defender of the study of language. Their views may not be the last word in the battle against the forces of McLuhanism, but there's no doubt that, collectively, they succeed in delivering some potentially mortal blows.

* * *

"If you try the experiment of watching television for an evening with the sound turned off you will soon appreciate the extent to which the 'communication' depends on language", notes F. E. L. Priestley. George Whalley comments wryly that if our sense of language continues its present decay, all we'll be left with is English as our "mutter-tongue"; and Geoffrey Durrant adds, "The message of the visual media is that you cannot answer back." According to Durrant, however, young people today show a general refusal "to accept the role assigned to them in what McLuhan has called 'the global village' of the television age — that of village idiots."

Perhaps most telling of all is Philip S. Smith Jr.'s demonstration that 20 years of experimentation have failed to produce a computer which can translate one language into another. ("A group at Harvard" reports that "their computer has found three analyses for the common adage, 'Time flies like an arrow'. Analysis number one is . . . a statement about the speed of time's passing. The second analysis finds an imperative sentence: telling someone to time the speed of flies, and do it quickly. And analysis number three is . . . about a kind of flies, called 'time flies', which are fond of arrows; sort of like saying, 'Fruit flies like a banana.'".)

Each essayist has his particular well-covered bone to pick, of course, but taken as a whole the message of In the Name of Language! runs something like this: At birth, we are alone. It is language which enables us to reach out to others, to form our conceptions of the world around us, and to participate in the human community. Conversely, it is also language that enables us to escape into the private world of imagination. In short, language is freedom. And that is why it is ultimately subversive.

I especially liked Geoffrey Durrant's diagnosis of what is wrong with our schools today — "the education (our) children are getting is not giving them the power of articulation. Without a steady growth in the power of language, the individual is left confused and helpless. He is surrounded by persuaders, hidden and open, in the classroom, on television and radio, in the press . . . but he himself is given no comparable power of persuasion, still less of self-knowledge . . . . (today's students) feel helpless, and inasmuch as they are inarticulate, they are helpless."

* * *

But this is only a sampling of the best that In the Name of Language! has to offer. Priestley's priceless observations on methods developed during 52 years of teaching everyone from first-graders to Ph.D. students; Hornyansky's witty explication of good usage ("'If it is used, it is usage': that is Webster's principle in a nutshell—and a nutshell is where it belongs"); editor Gold's stirring call to arms ("what can one do but insist that, if we fail to see how profoundly language is woven into our humanity we will inevitably dehumanize ourselves") — all make first class reading as well as a stunning commentary on the plight of English studies in our schools and universities today. One can only hope that our children's teachers, whatever their specialized "subject areas", will read this book. For, in the worlds of William Walsh, "The quality of an education depends most on the quality of the teacher, and the quality of the teacher is best indicated by his use of language."

IN THE NAME OF LANGUAGE!, edited by Joseph Gold. Macmillan. $14.95 cloth; $5.95 paper.

The Victims of 'Efficiency'

By JUDITH BURKETT

"Clip, bleed, squirt, think. Clip, bleed, squirt, yawn. Clip, bleed, squirt, scratch." Once every 36 seconds, 101 times an hour, a car glides by each man in turn on the world's fastest auto assembly line at General Motors' Vega plant in Lordstown, Ohio. Once every 36 seconds each man performs his assigned task, usually a single action. If management had its way, there would be no time for yawning or scratching.

In All the Livelong Day, Barbara Garson tackles a major labor problem of the highly-industrialized state, that of the repetitious, meaningless job which saps the will and crushes the self-esteem of the worker.

For management, the prime goal is profit through the exploitation of human labor, the using of another individual's work output for your own ends, not his. If management's prime goal is profit, its prime fear is whimsical human nature. Born of a basic mistrust in human beings, Control is the name of management's game.

Thinking their motives to be purely that of efficiency, industrial engineers assume the attitude of antagonism on the part of the worker and accordingly design control into jobs. A task is broken down into its component actions, and each man is then assigned one of the actions, which he repeats throughout his shift.

In reality, this is a means of constantly controlling an individual s performance — if a car comes off the line with no door-handle, the supervisor knows whom to blame. More important, while a task requiring several steps may necessitate a skilled worker, a single action may be taught to a new man in a few minutes. If you can't get that door-handle on in 36 seconds, well, there is always someone else who can.

ALL THE LIVELONG DAY: The Meaning and Demeaning of Routine Work, by Barbara Garson. Doubleday. $9.25.

Elimination of skilled work is a deliberate management policy. Very close, usually authoritarian supervision is another. Talking back to your supervisor at Lordstown can get you a disciplinary lay-off. So can complaining to the union. Or stopping the line.

Nothing stops the line. Production is paramount. No union, no matter how much money it has negotiated for its membership,, has succeedeed in gaining any say in how the product is produced. Control of production is regarded as the sacrosanct preserve of management, and George Meany has never even suggested that the auto workers themselves might determine the line speed or production methods.

Work is a human need. For the assembly-line worker, however, there is no satisfaction of accomplishment. His labor is being exploited to someone else's ends; there is no apparent purpose to the actions he must perform. He produces nothing. Sabotage is inevitable, as a relief from monotony and as a gesture of protest, but serves only as proof to management that workers cannot be trusted and that its control methods are justified. In the face of sabotage or other acts of protest, controls are made stricter. Eternal vigilance is the price of taking away other people's liberty."

"The underlying assumption of exploitation . . . is so deep and so pervasive that we can hardly conceive of a productive system based on any other premise . . . As long as control over the means of production stays in the hands of owners or managers, . . . we will be forced to make goods that we don't necessarily need and to work in ways that are debilitating and humiliating."

All the Livelong Day is short but important. Based upon personal interviews and Ms. Garson's own brief experience as a typist of lists of show dogs, it is a poignant essay in frustration and tenacity. No management will ever entirely replace human beings with machines. The tragedy is that there are those who would try.

A Briton in Search of America

By STEPHEN HUME

Simon Winchester is reporter for the Manchester Guardian. Last year he travelled 1,500 miles down U.S. Highway 35 from Lake Superior to the Rio Grande. In between these two bodies of water, the one immense as a sea, the other at times no more than a muddy stream, lies the heartland of America. American Heartbeat is the story of that journey.

Winchester writes with skill and energy about the people and places that define the character of the American middle country, and ultimately the character of America herself. American Heartbeat is a combination history and travel journal. A mother in Minnesota buying food stamps, a 72-year-old man riding his full-dressed Harley-Davidson to the cemetery where his wife is buried, the mock-English castle that sits at the foot of an atomic missile site, the giant Army bases, the truckers, farmers, highway patrolmen, and dream-like atomic weapons sites, assemble on the stage of American Heartbeat like the characters in an enormous, energized play.

The most expensive hotel suite in the world is located in the Celestial Hotel in Houston, Texas, $2,500 a night, but Winchester doesn't dawdle there. His journey is through the refineries, prisons, and missile sites that dot the land all the way to the barbed wire fence that divides America from its Mexican neighbors.

The U.S. sometimes gives the impression that it exists not for the millions who animate its cities and farms, but for the purposes of its weapons industry. American Heartbeat confirms that impression. Perhaps the heartbeat of America is a fearsome one indeed. Some of the companies that make parts for the stockpile of atom bombs are Union Carbide, Monsanto, G.E., Dow Chemical, and Bendix. And you thought all they made was dishwashers and garbage bags!

After reading American Heartbeat, it's hard not to feel some affection for the gutsiness of this British reporter. Like any seasoned traveler, he came prepared for the trip. "Before leaving home I had packed a small picnic basket with the kinds of luxuries I would not expect to find in the innumerable Holiday Inns, Ramada Inns and Best Western motels in which I was forced to stay."

American Heartbeat has a couple of flaws. The typography is sometimes sloppy. The price, $17.50, is steep for a book of its length with no photographs. This isn't Winchester's fault. Recently, the cost of British books went up over 100 per cent. You expect better quality for that price. It's an interesting and informative book, though, and for some the price may be worth it.

Journey of Discovery

In the mid-1920s a South African professor of anatomy, Raymond A. Dart, discovered on the edge of the Kalahari Desert the fossilized remains of a creature with a brain little larger than a chimpanzee but which was otherwise quite human. Dart named him Australopithecus.

Dart was convinced that the extinct creature was a member of our ancestral family, and from the evidence both of dentition and the barren environment which at no time could have supported forests and fruit, he was also convinced that the australopithecines were meat-eaters. No one was interested.

Decades passed and then, in 1953, Dart himself published his paper, The Predatory Transition from Ape to Man, in which he claimed that australopithecines were not only meat-eaters but armed hunters. Because no reputable scientific journal would print the paper it remained largely unread, and started no arguments.

As luck would have it a copy of the paper fell into the hands of Robert Ardrey, who had forsaken science to become a successful Broadway playwright. His interest in science rekindled, Ardrey went to South Africa, met Dart, inspected his evidence and became convinced that he was witnessing the start of a revolution in anthropology and in our estimates of man.

Ardrey promptly turned his back on Broadway and Hollywood, moved abroad and began five years of research and writing that culminated in his phenomenally successful book, African Genesis, a book unencumbered by footnotes and source notes so beloved by the academic community.

The importance of that book lay in the fact that for the first time millions of laymen were made interested in a subject previously debated only by specialists.

Naturally, the success of African Genesis infuriated the scientific establishment, and little men with closed minds, like Ashley Montagu, who consistently ignore facts that conflict with their outdated theories, scurried into their ivory towers to retaliate with ridicule.

Fortunately, at about the same time, the world learned of the momentous discoveries in Tanzania's Olduyai Gorge by Louis Leakey, his brilliant wife, Mary, and their son, Richard, of far older remains of homo erectus, a study of which confirmed Dart's and Ardrey's theories. Since then, Ashley Montagu and his kind have been conspicuous by their silence.

The ebullient Ardrey went marching on and followed his 1961 success with The Territorial Imperative (1966) and The Social Contract (1970). Now, based on his accumulated research and observations of two decades of anthropological investigation, Ardrey offers us The Hunting Hypothesis, which he describes as a personal conclusion concerning the evolutionary nature of man.

The Hunting Hypothesis is not so much a sequel to the three previous books as the culmination of them. In the past Ardrey has largely contented himself with a popular interpretation of the views of others; now he emerges as his own man to underline his own beliefs.

With logic and insight he addresses himself to the basic question: Why is man man? His answer to the question can best be summarized by quoting a key paragraph:

"For millions of years we survived as hunters. In the few short millenia since our divorce from that necessity there has been no time for significant biological change — anatomical, physiological, or behavorial. Today we have small hope of comprehending ourselves and our world unless we understand that man still, in his inmost being, remains a hunter."

From this premise, Ardrey, employing this usual sound scientific reasoning, liberally leavened with wit and humor, guides the reader on a remarkable journey of discovery through 20 million years of man's prehistory.

He takes us from the days when our ancestors first emerged from their arboreal home in the forests of Africa during the benevolent warmth and rains of the Miocene, through the unremitting drought of the Pliocene, through the dramatic climatic shifts of the Pleistocene, down to those few thousand years past when man emerged at last onto the stage of recorded history, a fully evolved hunting animal.

He also explores the crises man has met and overcome — larger predators, scant food supplies, prolonged drought, severe ice ages — and speculates on those characteristics of man that have enabled him to survive and thrive to populate and control even the most inhospitable corners of the globe.

In his final chapter Ardrey departs from his theme to remind us that we are now at the close of an interglacial period and that another ice age is in fact overdue. The signs, he points out, are already apparent on Canada's Baffin Land where for some time the snow has failed to melt in season. He forecasts that climate, and not our nuclear toys, will end the reign of man within a couple of decades, 100 years, or at most 1,000 years.

This final chapter is pure Ardrey. Although his guess is an educated one based on scientific evidence, he is clearly once again throwing his hat into the ring, inviting derogation so that he can write a fully documented book and once more humble his critics.

The Hunting Hypothesis, like his previous books, will have an enormous impact, both popular and scientific. In 20 years Ardrey has moved up from student to eminent authority and through his skill as a writer has unquestionably done more than any other to advance popular understanding of man's nature.

Not the least of his services in his latest book is the inclusion of bibliographical comment, directing the reader's attention to the mass of informed literature on his and allied subjects now available. So persuasive is his invitation that I am already re-reading Jane Van Lawick-Goodall's In the Shadow of Man, and I know I won't want to stop until I have read through the whole of his extensive list.

If you are familiar with Ardre's previous work you don't need me to egg you on to obtain The Hunting Hypothesis. If you haven't read Ardrey yet you have a treat in store, and I would advise savoring it to the full by beginning with African Genesis and then reading his other three books in sequence.

I say this because I believe that Ardrey's books are among the most important to be written in recent years. After all, he has satisfied to an astonishing degree both the demands of the ignorant layman and the requirements of the responsible scientists, and no one can ask more than that.

Mary Martin Tells How She Outdid Bessie Mae

By AUDREY JOHNSON

The Texas gal who has been one of the greatest Peter Pans in theatrical history, and the original and most famous Nellie Forbush of South Pacific, had written an uninhibited, self-revealing and breezy autobiography.

The author comes through as a full-blown but charming egotist who may be short on literary style but who has only one motive in writing—to let it all out, to tell all the people who may be interested in Mary Martin what it was like to be her; not just the stage luminary but the Texas smalltowner bubbling over with energy, a movie-hypnotized tomboy; the frustrated impulsive teenager; the devoted wife and mother.

A warm loving nature, a strong sense of loyalty to family—parents and sister—to friends and especially to anyone who had helped her during the learning years, are dominant impressions.

It is quite possible that never in her young life did Mary read Polonius's advice to Laertes about grappling tried friends to one's soul with hoops of steel, but she seems to have followed it nevertheless.

She had a childhood friend with whom she grew up from infancy with the incredible name of Bessie Mae Sue Ella Yaeger. When Mary Martin was 12 she put on a two-hour recital with Bessie Mae who played the violin and also sang . . . "but I danced better."

The two girls were much alike in looks and coloring. "We were both exhibitionists. She had personality, charm, warmth—all qualities that have been attributed to me, rightly or wrongly, through the years.

"So why did I have the career and not Bessie Mae?" Now Mary feels she knows the answer. "Give me four people and I'm on. Give me 400 and I'm a hundred times more on."

Bessie Mae's performance, she tells us, was preferably given for smaller, more intimate audiences. In other words Miss Martin is telling us loud and clear that from childhood she has had the pure unabashed and unswervable instincts of the born showman.

The Martin bond to early friendship was perpetuated by Mary's insistence on working Bessie Mae Sue Ella's name into each Hollywood movie she did and into South Pacific and Sound of Music.

In the latter, Mary's stand-in did a walk-on as a postulant using Bessie Mae's name, which had come to be regarded as a good luck charm. But about two years later the real Bessie Mae had to call for help to be extricated from the clutches of the Internal Revenue Service which was convinced she had earned 'heaven knows how much money from being a postulant in such a hit."

MARTIN

Mary tells us in a simple affecting style of her 33-year happy marriage to Richard Halliday, who was a screen writer and became the manager and devoted arbiter of her career until his death in 1973. And she glories in her roles as mother of their daughter, Heller, and her son by a former marriage, Larry Hagman, and as grandmother to their children as much as in the many glamorous successes of her career.

She describes, for instance, wearing a short silver fox jacket to a party at Mary Pickford's home, leaving the party to take a long romantic drive with Richard, going back to Pickfair, grabbing what she thought was her silver fox and driving away in the dawn.

"In the car I felt nice and warm and happy. Then I looked down and here was this coat clear to the floor. I thought 'My gosh, it's been a long night.' I knew this coat when it was a pup and now it's a Newfoundland dog."

The book is an entertainment as well as an exploration of a powerful personality. The show territory it covers from Hollywood to New York and London is predictable and familiar from the many performer autobiographies that have gone before. But that does not prevent it having a zesty freshness, nor at times down-to-the-bone common sense value for young readers who may be talented and ambitious.

Mary Martin makes it pefectly clear that talent by itself is not enough, though it is essential. There is one factor that is more critical than either talent or training (when she was launched on her career she could not read a note of music and her dancing was more natural than schooled).

She sums up that factor in a paragraph concerning her final break-through at a Trocadero Club talent show after frustrating months of failure to get her foot on the ladder:

"All through the years young people have asked me what makes the big break happen. I have always answered the same: work. Work and work and work, be ready when the break comes . . . I had hundreds of auditions but I was not ready until that fateful Sunday night."

Yes, You Can Fight City Hall

By JULIAN REID

"You can't fight City Hall." This notion is so deeply entrenched in our conventional wisdom that it has become proverbial; yet, realistically, it ranks on a level with the equally proverbial advice addressed to the victims of rape: "Just lie back and enjoy it, baby." Each is merely a self-serving effusion of the rapist mentality — in one case on the individual, in the other, on the communal level.

In The Rape of Our Neighborhoods, journalist William Worthy insists that we can and must take up collective arms against institutional rapists when they mount their assaults on the well-being of our communities. The necessary legalistic weapons are available, and so are the handbooks of strategy and tactics. All that remains to be conjured up is our determination to resist, confident that even in the face of deeply entrenched power we have a very good chance of collectively prevailing.

Only after a quarter-century of journalistic crusading on the disputed military and political battlegrounds of the world did Worthy himself awaken to the need to combat "institutional imperialism" on the home front. He was home himself now, comfortably esconced in his New York apartment — one of 48 in an old brownstone building located diagonally across the street from Columbus Hospital.

In 1970 the building was purchased by the hospital, which planned to demolish it to clear space for a 27-car parking lot. A "relocation company" was hired to force the tenants out. In the face of largely illegal pressures and a systematic program of harrassment, it took a full year for the remaining tenants to overcome their debilitating sense of collective impotence. The story of how they eventually organized, and of the 5-year fight that preserved their building, is told fully in Worthy's book.

* * *

The Columbus Hospital incident is unspectacular but all too typical — Worthy cites other case-histories to bolster his contention that "if you've researched one expansionist institution, you've researched them all." Their behavior is governed by Parkinson's Law: Public or private, institutions expand simply because it is their bureaucratized nature to do so. Moreover, as Worthy points out, many "non-profit" organizations are in reality operated on a profit-making basis; since these profits must necessarily be plowed back into the organization itself, their very existence fuels the expansionist drive.

The process has little relation to the institution's own legitimate needs, nor those of the community it purports to serve. Rationales are adduced — reports citing hypothetical projections of "future demands," along with present inadequacies which must be summarily dealt with. But all this is mere self-justifying rhetoric; often it cannot stand up to even a cursory examination.

When uncontrolled growth takes root in the human body, we have a name for it — cancer. When it develops in the body politic, the equivalent condition goes nameless; but its long-term consequences are just as fatal. History is littered with victims of institutional cancers — ideals, churches, communities, nations, entire civilizations even, all of them raddled with the insatiable tumors of unbridled institutionalism.

History also demonstrates that, in institutions as in individuals, entrenched power engenders not only gross corruption, but along with it gross stupidity. And for this reason there is, in an openly democratic society, always room for hope. Cancer of the body politic can be arrested — provided vigorous countermeasures are taken in time.

As Worthy observes: "Institutions by their actions tell themselves and tell the public, 'We are the law.' Because arrogance sooner or later leads to gross carelessness, they are vulnerable up and down the line." The specific advice he offers on how institutions can be kept in line by public exposure and by the threat of public accountability is primarily oriented to a U.S. audience — but, as the Pickering airport saga demonstrated, here in Canada the issues and appropriate strategies are pretty much the same.

Now a seasoned veteran of the "community wars," William Worthy is eminently qualified to provide counsel and inspiration to those whose homes, businesses, or communities are threatened by the cancer of institutional imperialism. Like Saul Alinsky's Rules For Radicals, The Rape of Our Neighborhoods is an eloquently well informed demonstration that, armed with grit and imagination, ordinary citizens can indeed prevail against the institutional "City Halls" of the world. As the Latin motto adorning one Pennsylvania official's office puts it, "Populus iamdudum defutatus est" — which, freely translated, means: "The public has been screwed long enough."
